9 Are Dead, 9 Missing As Rivers Start to Fall

Damage Placed In the Millions; Amphibious Craft Seek More Victims

Disastrous flood waters yesterday began receding in the valleys of the Potomac's South Branch and the Shenandoah River, leaving a toll of nine known dead and nine missing.

Weather Bureau forecasters said they saw no immediate indications of new flood conditions.

Destruction and desolation were widespread in Virginia and West Virginia. Damage was estimated in the millions of dollars—in homes, other buildings, livestock and crops lost.

The search for victims still was on as Red Cross disaster workers, Army and National Guard members, police and health authorities worked to feed, shelter and care for the homeless.

They trucked in food, fresh water, Army cots and blankets and began inoculating residents against typhoid fever.

Hardest hit communities were Bridgewater, Va., and Petersburg and Moorefield, W. Va.

The death list compiled by authorities yesterday included West Virginia State Police Corpl. A. M. Hurst, 41, and his son, Ronald, 12; Leota Redmond, 16; Neta Walker, 18; Winston V. Beckwith, 2; William Jenkins, a deaf mute, and George Lefever, all of Petersburg; Mrs. C. R. Bowman and Margaret Frances Bricker, both of Bridgewater, Va. Miss Bricker previously was identified erroneously as Mrs. Nora Mae Shirkey.

The Army sent amphibious landing equipment to Moorefield to aid in search for victims. Lieut. Theodore Ferry, a liaison pilot from National Guard headquarters at Keyser, W. Va., flew back and forth over a 60-mile-stretch of the valleys to spot flood victims, either drowned or marooned.

Highway crews with bulldozers and other equipment labored around the clock to remove debris from roads and to throw up temporary bridges so traffic could move in the distressed areas.

Robert M. Farrington, of the Associated Press, wrote from Petersburg that around him lay "the desolated land—trees uprooted, crops washed away, dead poultry by the thousands. Down near the tannery had stood the modest homes of some 100 families.

"Slimy, leaking mud churned up from the river bottom was plastered 6 inches thick on the floors. Men, women and children, soaked to the skin by the rain which let up only occasionally, poked the saturated bedding and compared watermarks 6 to 8 feet high on the walls.

"Red Cross volunteers set up food kitchens in a grade school and rounded up cots to take fami-

Policeman Drops From Helicopter To Runaway Boat

New York, June 19 (AP).—A daring policeman lowered himself from a helicopter into a runaway speedboat today and brought the craft under control after it endangered scores of other small boats in Jamaica Bay.

The speedboat, its rudder locked, sped in dizzy circles about the crowded bay after its pilot had fallen overboard. Police and Coast Guard surface craft were unable to approach the boat, which was scudding over the water at 23 miles an hour.

Police sent a helicopter to the scene. While its pilot, Acting Sergt. Gerald Crosson, held the helicopter directly over the speeding boat, Detective Harold W. Behrens slid out of the cabin and dropped into the wildly careening craft.

Behrens turned off the outboard motor.

3-Foot Rise Forecast

Crest of Flood Expected Here Between 4 and 5 P. M. Today

Crest of the flood, born with a cloudburst Friday night in the Shenandoah and Potomac Valleys, is expected to hit Washington about 4 or 5 o'clock this afternoon, according to Army Engineers.

The river is expected to rise 3 feet above normal to a level of 6 feet, one foot short of a limited flood emergency. The river here began rising last night.

The Army has notified the District Sewer Department that some outlets may be flooded, but utility substations and waterfront property are expected to escape unscathed.

The flood crest passed Harpers Ferry, W. Va., just before dark last night. North of there the river was receding; south the water was rising last night, but slowly.

Emergency Declaration Debated

For three hours yesterday afternoon the Corps of Engineers debated declaring a limited flood emergency. Such a declaration in fact was planned, but overruled on the basis of last-minute water-level readings between Washington and the flood areas in northern Virginia and West Virginia.

North of the Chain Bridge, where the Potomac River is narrow, normal levels may be exceeded by as much as 5 or 6 feet, the Army said. South of the bridge, where the river widens, a peak river height of 6 feet is expected.

Some flooding will occur in Palisades Park, a marshy area between the Potomac River and the C&O Canal. But occupants of homes on the banks of the canal and the river have not been warned to evacuate.

Some possibility still remained that the Army would declare a limited flood emergency, but a spokesman said such a decision would not be made at least before 8 this morning.

Under the Army's flood protection plan for the District, the height of the Potomac River at the Wisconsin ave. gauge is used as a danger yardstick. In the Flood Emergency Manual, critical elevations are listed for all waterfront locations. These elevations are listed in terms of corresponding water levels at the Wisconsin ave. gauge.

Housing Bill Compromise Seems Likely

Sponsors in House May Cut Measure To Senate's Size

By Robert C. Albright
Post Reporter

With a compromise definitely in the offing, the Administration's long-range housing bill faces a ding-dong battle this week in the House.

Freed at last from a Rules Committee pigeonhole, the bill will reach the House floor Wednesday. But the touch-and-go effort to pass it involves an Administration finesse through conservative strength.

Sponsors privately concede they may have to cut it back to Senate size before they corral enough votes, but probably won't formally unveil their compromise until the bill reaches the floor.

Republican moderates, breaking away from the otherwise solid GOP opposition, meanwhile have come up with a compromise of their own. It is modeled somewhat along Senate bill lines in its slum clearance and public housing features, but adds an entirely new program of privately owned housing for families of lower income.

Offers Best Chance

This group, which first took a stand in a GOP general conference last week, provides a partial offset to the Southern Democratic opposition to the bill and offers the Administration its best chance of enacting housing legislation.

Sponsors of the GOP compromise number 10, but one of their leaders, Representative J. K. Javits (R., N. Y.) predicted yesterday that about 30 House Republicans will vote for housing legislation.

With that much GOP support, Democratic leaders could lose as many as 50 Southern votes and still pass a bill. Democratic talk

Mayor Who Would Dig Holes For Speeders Faces Ouster

By Phillip J. Austensen
Post Reporter

A hot time is expected at a special meeting of the Forest Heights, Md., Town Council tonight.

Tonight's meeting was called to decide on awarding a contract for collection of trash and garbage, but dogs and roads and sundry other subjects, including a petition to oust the mayor, have somehow gotten mixed up in the agenda.

The town was incorporated only in April, and the town council and mayor were sworn in May 18.

The petition to oust the mayor apparently is sponsored by Mrs. Michael Calderaro, 205 Woodland dr., who with several neighbors has been busily circulating it among the townsfolk. She probably will present it to the council meeting tonight, her husband said.

The petition says the mayor has "ideas not in agreement" with those of some of the townspeople. It says the mayor said that the way to stop speeding is to dig holes in the road so that cars going faster than 25 miles an hour will turn over, and that a dog round-up day should be proclaimed on which all dogs running loose should be shot.

Mayor M. F. Maury Osborne, a physicist at the Naval Research Laboratory and one of the leaders for the town's incorporation, said: "I'm not a politician and didn't ask for the job but now that I've joined the choir I'm going to take part in the singing." He said his interest in incorporation of the town was because he was "tired of having sewage run past my yard and the springs on my car

U. S. Offered Farm Plan For South

By John W. Ball
Post Reporter

A new farm plan, embodying many proposals recently made by Agriculture Secretary Brannan, has been offered by two Southern economists.

The plan is contained in a study of why the South has failed to keep up with the rest of the country economically and of how suggested Federal policies could aid it. It was made for the Council of Economic Advisers by economists of the National Planning Association.

It is the first regional economic study made for CEA. In its 154 pages it upsets many ideas of long standing on the reasons for the South's economic lag.

Both Are at Duke

The authors are Dr. Calvin B. Hoover, director of research for the NPA Committee of the South, and Dr. B. R. Ratchford. Both are on the staff of the economics department of Duke University.

The primary aim of Federal policy toward the South should be to raise its low per capita wealth and income, the authors state. These, they add, stem from the low ratio of natural resources to population. This, in turn, is responsible for the low level of physical production in the South.

However, the authors point out, this low ratio of natural and capital resources to population, resulting in low productivity, is not entirely responsibale for low per capita income. Much of this, it states, is due to an unfavorable exchange of Southern goods and services for goods and services produced elsewhere.

"Historically," the report says, "the South has produced bulk agricultural commodities embodying much manual labor and has manufactured commodities which also embody much labor.

"Administered Prices"

"Until quite recently these commodities were sold under market conditions approximating those of free competition, except as our tariff limited the international market for those goods.

"The commodities which the South purchased, by contrast, were generally produced and sold under conditions of monopolistic competition characterized by 'administered prices.'"

Improvement in this situation has been brought about by "intervention of the State," the report points out—such as in cotton and tobacco.

"Although the South has made substantial progress in overcoming the economic lag behind the rest of the country in the past 20 years, much remains to be done," the authors say.

"The fundamental means by which the economic lag can be overcome is through the increase in productivity and value of output of Southern industry and agriculture.

Diversified Crops Called Need

"This means that the South must have more industry and the kind of industry in which the value of output per worker is higher.

"It means an agriculture of fewer uneconomically small farms and of more medium-sized farms employing fewer people with larger output per capita and with

2.8 Billion GI Dividend To Be Paid

A dividend of $2,800,000,000 on approximately 20 million National Service Life Insurance policies has been authorized by Carl R. Gray, jr., Veterans' Administrator.

Of the total number of payees eligible for the special dividend, about 16 million are veterans of World War II. No calculations have yet been made of amounts individuals will receive.

In a statement to be released today, Gray expresses hope that distribution of checks "can be started sometime in January, 1950, and be substantially completed during the first half of 1950."

In general, every veteran who took out the Government's insurance and kept it in force for three months or more will be eligible for payment of the dividend, it was indicated. In cases where policyholders have died, beneficiaries will get the payments, or if the policy had lapsed, those shown to be entitled to it.

The Veterans Administration will strongly urge veterans not to write about obtaining the dividends because this will slow up the payments. By August, officials hope to have application forms printed for distribution over the country in postoffices, veterans' service organizations and Veterans Administration offices.

Under this procedure, the veteran will receive a three-fold card. He will put the application on two of the sections and send them in with pertinent information.

One of the sections will be returned to him by the Veterans Administration as acknowledgement of receipt of his application.

There are currently 7,215,000 of the National Service Life Insurance policies still in force, with a total face value of $41,552,000,000. Some veterans have two of them, it is reported.

The anniversary date in 1948 of the issuance of the policy will be the cut-off date used in calculating the dividend. It will not be paid on policies issued after January 1, 1949, though such policies may be eligible for other special dividends later.

VA Spokesman Denies GI Dividend Declaration

By The Associated Press

A Veterans' Administration official said last night Administrator Carl R. Gray, jr., has not yet authorized payment of special national service life insurance dividends.

An announcement that Gray had done so was mailed out to wire services and some newspapers through an unexplained error in mailing, A. W. Woolford, director of information for the VA, told a reporter.

Woolford said the agency had attempted to recall all the copies of the announcement, or have them withheld from publication.

Actually, Gray has been out of the city for a week and has not had an opportunity to pass upon the question, Woolford said.

The VA has been expected for some time to announce payment of dividends totalling about $2,800,000,000 to about 16 million veterans of World War II.

Woolford said Gray is expected to review the question today.

Harvard Rejects Ober's Plea To Punish 2 'Pink' Professors

OBER CONANT CLARK

Harvard president and fellow spurn Ober's suggestion

By James E. Hague
Post Reporter

A Maryland State legislator's suggestion that Harvard discipline two of its faculty for leftist activity and set up its own loyalty program has been spurned by the university.

The suggestion was made by Frank Ober of Baltimore, a Harvard graduate and author of Maryland's recently-enacted antisubversive law.

Harvard President James B. Conant replied:

"We believe that our way of operating the university is not only in the best interests of Harvard but of importance to the country."

Grenville Clark, attorney, author of the World War II Selective Service Act and a Harvard College fellow, told Ober:

"Let me say at once that your proposals—apparently to dismiss or censure two professors, and certainly to impose drastic controls on the activities as citizens of all professors—cannot and will not be adopted at Harvard, so long as Harvard remains true to her principles. These proposals are absolutely contrary to Harvard's tradition and all she stands for."

As a Harvard College fellow, Clark holds a position roughly comparable to trustee. He is the senior fellow.

The correspondence on the subject was issued yesterday in a special reprint from the Harvard Alumni Bulletin.

On April 26, Ober wrote to Conant concerning incidents involving Prof. Harlow Shapley and DRIVEN FROM THRONE—Catholics in Prague rally round Archbishop Josef Beran as he leaves the ancient Strahov monastery Saturday night in a visit which marked the end of his four-day imprisonment

Churches Hear His Letter

Beran's Defiance Howled Down By Reds in Prague Cathedral

Prague, June 19 (U.P.).—Shouting, whistling hecklers drowned out Archbishop Josef Beran, leader of the Catholic Church in Czechoslovakia, in St. Vitus Cathedral today, when he tried to criticize policies of the Communist regime. But priests in Catholic churches throughout the country, by the archbishop's order, read a defiant pastoral letter denouncing government interference in religious matters, and asserting:

"Every Czech and Slovak Catholic must realize that his time of test has come, in which he has to tell the sheep from the 'wolves in sheeps' clothing,' and that in issues of religious freedom there can be no compromise whatever."

Priests Warned by Police

Reliable sources said police officials visited many churches early today and warned priests that it would be illegal to read the letter.

Twice the 61-year-old archbishop, who spent three years in Dachau concentration camp for defying the Nazis, was howled down by an apparently organized leftist group as he started to deliver a sermon at a Corpus Christi Day mass in St. Vitus.

Later hecklers broke up a spontaneous Catholic demonstration in his honor under the balcony of his palace.

But in pulpits of Catholic Churches here and elsewhere priests were reading his letter to their parishioners.

Archbishop's Defiance

Archbishop Beran in his letter:

1. Accused the state of using all means of propaganda to spread "untrue statements" that failure to reach agreement was the fault of the bishops.

2. Asserted that the Catholic clergy have been and are loyal to the state, and have always been and are in favor of a just settlement of church-state disputes, provided there is no interference in church affairs.

3. Accused the state of such "unfriendly actions" as suppressing the Catholic press and even the official diocesan gazettes, which he said were not stopped "even during the German occupation."

4. Denounced the new official "Catholic Action" organization as "false and schismatic."

5. Warned that "cooperation with it must be punished . . . those who inspire and brought it into

Two Officials Fail to See Cold War End

Gov. Dewey, ECA Chief Agree Free World Linked to Cooperation

Williamstown, Mass., June 19 (AP).—Paul G. Hoffman and Gov. Thomas E. Dewey today joined in declarations they could see no prospect of an end to the cold war.

They agreed a free world depends on continued successful cooperation of countries in western Europe.

The Economic Cooperation Administrator said indications that "Russia has now decided on a policy of 'stop, look and listen'" would have significance "only if translated into a decision that 'to live and let live' is the wisest policy."

Governor Dewey, 1948 Republican presidential nominee, declared that the question of peace or war would be decided "by the 13 men of the Politburo in the Kremlin."

"But why should those 13 men be stupid enough to change from a cold war to a shooting war?" he asked.

"They have won more in the last four years of uneasy peace than any nation ever won by war. They have conquered 200 million people in middle Europe and nearly 400 million in China. They believe that by the continued use of native traitors they will gain Indo-China, Siam, Malaya, and ultimately, all Asia."

Hoffman and Dewey spoke at commencement exercises of Williams College. Both received honorary doctor of laws degrees.

Dewey, who last week came home from a trip to western Europe, said European recovery was the most important immediate task to prevent a cold war becoming a "hot war."

He declared: "Every statesman in western Europe is looking with grim foreboding to 1952 when

Policeman Out to Quiet Revel Ends Up Accused of Wild Ride

Montgomery County Policeman Colin (Pete) Turner, stationed at Takoma Park police station, was reported relieved from duty early yesterday as the result of an alleged wild ride in a police car.

Turner, according to Inspector James S. McAuliffe, is to report this morning to the inspector, who is handling the case at Rockville police headquarters.

McAuliffe said his action against Turner followed a complaint by John Bruff, 7306 Wildwood ave., Takoma Park, that a county police car had been operating recklessly and had narrowly missed his car about 2 a. m.

Police officials said Turner answered a call to quiet a loud party on Cedar ave. and that they had been informed he had accepted a drink while there. The alleged "wild" ride followed Turner's appearance at the party, police said.

Turner was accompanied by a Takoma Park city policeman, McAuliffe reported, when he went on the party call, but the Takoma policeman was not involved in the driving complaint.

Lieut. Earl Thomas, Takoma Park police chief, said the Takoma policeman had gone out to answer another call in the city car after returning from the trip to quiet the party. Thomas said he is investigating, but has not received any formal complaint about the city policeman.

Turner was appointed to the county police force as an emergency policeman during the war and later was named to the regular force. His superiors report he has had an excellent record so far. He is married and has three children.

East, West Will Keep In Contact; Hopes Rise

Council Expected To Adjourn Today; Acheson to Report To Truman Tuesday

By Walter Kerr

Paris, June 19 (NYHT).—The Council of Foreign Ministers tonight reached virtual agreement on a modus vivendi for Germany and the broad outlines of a peace treaty for Austria.

In Germany no new Allied or German organizations will be created, but contact between the Allied powers will be maintained and efforts will be redoubled to ease trade and transport restrictions between the Eastern and Western zones of occupation.

On the Austrian question the major obstacles have been overcome, and, although some disagreements remain, it is believed a final settlement can be worked out in the next two months.

Meeting in Secret

These significant results of four weeks of negotiation were reached at a secret meeting tonight attended by U. S. Secretary of State Dean Acheson, British Foreign Secretary Ernest Bevin, French Foreign Minister Robert Schuman and Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Vishinsky.

They were not anticipated by the Western Powers when the Paris Conference first began, and there now is definite hope a step has been taken that may lead to a relaxation of world tension, perhaps to an end of the cold war.

High-level deputies of the four ministers will meet at 10 a. m. Monday to write a final communique to be submitted to the Council in the afternoon. The Council will meet secretly at 3 p. m., then in plenary session at 3:30 p. m.

Adjournment is expected late in the day and Acheson plans to leave for Washington Monday night. He will report to President Truman Tuesday.

Details Not Announced

Details of today's meeting have not been made public, but it is understood the German modus vivendi (means of "getting along") has been reached and only a few matters remain for the ministers to discuss about the Austrian treaty.

The latter arrangement represents the result of hard bargaining and compromise in which the Soviet Union surrendered Yugoslav claims to territory (Carinthia) and reparations and the Western states granted economic concessions to the Russians.

On this deal it is believed Russia has been given 60 per cent of the Zistersdorf oil fields, 60 per cent of Danubian Shipping Co. interests in Austria and 150 million dollars as compensation for other claims surrendered.

If a treaty is signed in the end, all four powers will evacuate their occupation troops and, in addition,

Spellman Scores Barden Bill, Asks Prayers for Him

New York, June 19 (AP).—Francis Cardinal Spellman today asked 15,000 persons to pray for Representative Barden (D., N. C.), sponsor of an education bill which the Cardinal called "un-American, anti-Catholic legislation."

He said Barden and other backers of the bill were "shamefully fostering discrimination against parochial school children" and were venting "venom upon children."

He said Barden's bill for Federal aid to education would direct that under no circumstances would non-public school pupils receive the health benefits and transportation services provided for pupils in public schools.

Third Ave. Transit Files Petition To Reorganize

New York, June 19 (AP).—The world's largest private bus and trolley system filed a reorganization petition today under Federal bankruptcy laws.

James Hodes, president of the Third Avenue Transit System, said the action was taken because of New York City's rejection of an 8-cent fare—1 penny more than now charged. The system carries about 1,800,000 passengers a day.

Soviet Has Obedient Ally in Swedish Reds

By Frank Gervasi
Post Reporter

Copenhagen, June 19.—Sweden, industrial power house and key state of Scandinavia, has the peninsula's best organized Communist Party.

Sweden's Communists, like their brethren in Denmark, Norway and Finland, have received instructions to reform into a quasi-military organization for fifth column work to achieve, whenever the Kremlin deems it necessary, what it failed to do politically—dominate Scandinavia.

The strategic importance of this immense but sparsely inhabited region in any war between Russia and the Western Powers—a war which the Kremlin's doctrinaires consider inevitable—is obvious from a glance at the map.

Denmark Food Factory

Denmark is an invaluable food factory. Norway has a long, fjord-indented Atlantic coastline, which would provide excellent bases for the huge Soviet submarine fleet. Sweden, its subsoil stuffed with iron and other valuable minerals, has one of the most modern industrial plants and some of the best shipyards in the world.

But, perhaps more important, Scandinavia is a great, curving earth mass that geographically bottles up the Soviet fleet in the Baltic Sea. Russia would be obliged to dominate it to insure free movement of its warships and freighters from the Baltic into the Kattegat, the Skagerrak and the North Sea.

The Soviets took two steps toward domination of the peninsula when they swallowed the Baltic States in 1939-40 and, in 1944, obtained from defeated Finland a naval base at Porkkala build by the Finns, ironically, as "protection" against the Russians.

Having failed, as related in a previous article, to complete control of Scandinavia by political methods in the postwar years, the Kremlin is apparently preparing to use its Communist Party organizations as fifth columns if and when it becomes necessary to secure what would be a "northern flank" in the event of war.

But whereas the Danes, Norwegians and those old antagonists of the Russians, the Finns, are alive to the dangers to their internal security which the Communists would present in any conflict involving their husky neighbor, the Swedes do not appear to be.

"We know who the Communists are," one official said, "and in an emergency we shall know how to take care of them."

It is doubtful whether about 140 years of peace have fitted Swedes to recognize an emergency even if it looked them straight in the eye. Perennial neutrality has taught them little about warfare and less about the special kind of in-fighting required to combat fifth columnism.

Democratic Danish elements have organized an underground of their own to fight the Communist underground. In Norway the citizens have organized a volunteer civilian defense corps of some 50,000 men, many of them wartime freedom fighters. But in Sweden no preparations have been made to meet internal trouble in the event of war.

Problem for Police

Swedish police complain that they have not been given sufficient money and men to deal with Soviet agents who are apparently entering the country freely from eastern Germany and other training centers.

Sweden, with a population of less than seven million, has more Communists than the United States. Their leaders claim at least 60,000 members.

But the geographic distribution of Swedish Communists is far more significant than their numbers. In Denmark and Norway the Commies are concentrated chiefly in the big ports and industrial centers. In Sweden they are most numerous in the Nordbotten area in the north through which the strategic railways connecting east coast ports with Narvik, in northern Norway, run.

A similar distribution occurs in Finland. Lapland, adjacent to the Nordbotten and with a common frontier with the Soviet Union, is also well-sprinkled with Communists. Presumably a Soviet army drive across Finland and Sweden to Norway's Atlantic coast would find plenty of friendly folk along the way.

"Russia could take that part of Scandinavia," one authoritative Swedish source said, "with a squad and a telephone."

None of the other Scandinavian leaders, not even Finland's Villa Pessi and Herta Kuusinen, were quite as categoric in following the "we-will-fight-for-Russia" line enunciated by France's Thorez and Italy's Togliatti as were the Swedish Commie bosses when their turn came to echo Kremlin orders.

These, Sven Linderot and Fritjof Lager, asserted that "if the criminal forces of capitalist reaction unleash another world war . . . it (will be) the obvious duty of every Communist, nay, every Swedish patriot, to make every effort to combat the imperialist war instigators and to act as did the people of Denmark and Norway when, during the last war, they liberated their countries with the aid of the Soviet Union."

Linderot's and Lager's was the clearest of all calls to Communist underground action in the event of an East-West war uttered by Scandinavian leaders.

The actual task of revamping the Swedish Communist Party into a fighting underground machine has been handed to Lager, 44, and reputedly as tough as they come. A former newspaperman and frequent visitor to Moscow, he has been party general secretary since November, 1948. He is married to a Danish woman and is often seen here in Copenhagen in the company of Danish Communists.

Lager has largely usurped the functions and prerogatives of sixty-ish and ailing Linderot, whose real name is Sven Larsson, member of the Comintern Executive Committee from 1935 to 1943. Linderot, or Larsson, remains titular head of the party but he is suspected of being more Swedish than Russian and for such as he there is no place in the Kremlin's scheme of things.

A further and significant difference between Swedish communism and its Danish and Norwegian equivalents, at least—Finland is victim of a similar condition—is the existence within the ruling Social Democratic Party of a crypto-Communist left splinter group.

Just how large this element is it is difficult to say. It is composed of intellectuals and professional people who preach "cooperation with Russia" and still hold to the belief that the Soviets are "peace-loving" and sincerely determined to create the "ideal Marxist state."

The element was strong enough to influence substantially Sweden's decision to stay out of the Atlantic Pact, a decision which some important members of the Swedish general staff secretly but vigorously opposed. In both Denmark and Norway the Social Democrats, sworn enemies of communism, led the debates in favor of participation. In Sweden they opposed participation.

Sweden's refusal to join the Atlantic Pact must be chalked up as a major victory for Soviet propaganda, a victory made possible by the presence in the nation's social, political and economic life of well-placed Communist stooges and agents.

Led by an unhealthy-looking fellow of 35 named Axel Jansson, the Communists have organized the Swedish Youth Movement which plugs the party line at "youth parliaments," "youth councils," "debating societies," "conscripts' welfare clubs" and scores of other front organizations with about 15,000 members.

John Takman, an admitted Communist, runs an elite society of left-wing intellectuals called Clarte, frequented by some 500 of Sweden's social creme de la creme who absorb the Kremlin line at soirees and then dish it out in articles for the literary journals.

But the Communists' best ally is probably Andrea Andreen, Sweden's number one fellow-traveler, 61-year-old wife of The Svedberg, the nuclear scientist. She is technically a member of the Social Democratic Party but is always ready to sponsor resolutions and sign petitions for front organizations.

She is head of the Swedish Women's Leftist Association which the Communists have found so useful that they have not formed one of their own.

Nowhere in Scandinavia is the duality of Soviet policy, which talks peace and prepares for conquest, clearer than in Sweden. Nowhere is there less inclination to do anything about it. Some Swedes say that they cannot crack down on the Communists because the Soviets might retaliate by cutting off Polish coal supplies so essential to the Swedish iron industry. But the real reason may be that it hopes to remain neutral in another war and profit thereby as it did twice before. Meanwhile the commies are writing Sweden's obituary.

French Delegation Leaves Today for Trade Treaty Talks in Moscow

Paris, June 19 (NYHT.).—A French trade delegation will leave Monday for Moscow to negotiate the first postwar Franco-Soviet trade agreement, it was learned today.

The decision to hold the talks is apparently a reflection of a desire by the Kremlin to increase its trade with Western Europe.

Trade between France and the Soviet Union has been negligible since the war. In 1947 France imported 10 million dollars worth of goods from Russia, and in 1948 the figure dropped to eight million dollars. During the same years French exports to the Soviet Union were under $500,000.

These figures compare with Soviet exports to France valued at 17 million dollars in 1938, and 8 million dollars worth of Soviet imports from France that year.

6. Called on all who have associated themselves with "Catholic Action" to renounce their declarations.

7. Asserted that the dispute between church and state had reached the point where there is "an undermining of Roman Catholic ideology which is anti-Christian and which proclaims the replacement of religion by Marxism, and appropriates for the state all rights even in matters of conscience, faith and morals which no Christian can recognize."

8. Called for opposition to "commissars named by the state" to church offices.

9. Offered to negotiate an agreement between church and state if church rights are respected.

The letter called on all clergymen and parishioners to "steel their Christian gallantry" and "be firm in your holy creed."

Six thousand persons jammed St. Vitus Cathedral to hear the Corpus Christi sermon of the archbishop, who in a public appearance Saturday warned Catholics not to believe any "confession" he might make in the future.

Church officials said about 250 members of the Communist "workers militia" were in the congregation.

As soon as Archbishop Beran started to discuss the new "Catholic Action" organization and the government's new "Catholic News," which he has ordered his followers to ignore, a man shouted at him. A youth next to him started whistling.

Worshipers started hissing the interruptors.

Women knelt in prayer.

Silently a large group of men moved in front of the altar and formed a protective wall before Archbishop Beran.

Worshipers said plainclothes policemen led out a man who had criticized the hecklers.

The clamor subsided. Archbishop Beran tried to start his sermon again but was at once howled down.

He gave up. But as the heckling still continued the worshipers began singing the Czechoslovak national anthem, not a part of the service.

Then they sang the hymn of St. Wenceslaus: "Protect our country from all evil."

There is a legend that Wenceslaus, the country's patron saint, will come to Czechoslovakia's aid when it is in mortal danger.

"It is obvious to me," he added, "that we must also provide the European countries with military equipment to be strong enough to defend themselves."

Hoffman declared the first by-product of the Marshall Plan "has been stopping the Kremlin cold in its drive to communize western Europe . . .

"The second is the developing sense of unity which the recovery program has brought to the free nations of western Europe and to this free Nation of ours."

Denazification Fails, German Editor Says

By John London
Post Reporter

The Western powers have definitely failed to de-Nazify the Germans because of the military government's ignorance of German psychology, a prominent German publisher stated here last night.

The statement was made in an interview with Franz Joseph Schoningh, publisher and editor of the Sudeutschen Zeitung, largest newspaper in southern Germany with a circulation of 280,000, and Hochland, leading Catholic monthly periodical.

Schoningh, on a visit here with other newspapermen to study American journalism, outlined several reasons why the occupying powers have not reached the mind of the average German.

While stressing that his views are not meant as a rebuke to the military government, many of whose officials have heard his suggestions sympathetically, Schoningh pointed out:

1. Most Germans realize Goebbels' propaganda was false. They also suspect any source of information now.

"They can only be persuaded as to the wrongness of nazism by facts, facts, facts—and the Western powers have failed to produce documented, proven facts."

Got off to Bad Start

2. The Allies got off to a bad start. They initiated reeducation of the Germans by stressing mass guilt of the German people, which created resentment and suspicion, not conversion and belief.

3. The Allies have not sufficiently used German leaders to enlighten the people. What the Allies themselves have said about Hitler's schemes for world conquest and the vicious brutality of nazism has been held suspect. After all, the Germans thought, conquerors and occupiers were doing the talking.

4. Denazification courts boomeranged. By hauling into court masses of small fry, many of whom belonged to the Nazi Party only for expediency, by delaying action against bigwigs, the courts antagonized the masses and discredited themselves.

As an example of the lack of documented material on the history and roots of National Socialism in Germany, and how it led to war, Schoningh pointed out that he had to get material from Switzerland to produce an article on the subject.

Textbooks in the schools mention nothing at all about recent history, not a word about Nazism, how it arose and what it did to the world, he said.

"If I ask a man in a German street why World War II started," said Schoningh, "nine out of 10 say it was because the English declared war over the Polish corridor.

"They have a feeling instinctively that something the Nazis did wasn't right because it all ended disastrously—but what was wrong they don't know."

This reaction is understandable, inevitable, he said, noting that only one small book has been published in Germany since the war to explain the causes of the holocaust. That book, by one Kordt, tries to show how Hitler connived for war—but it is written for "highbrows," beyond comprehension of the masses, he declared.

Newsprint Shortage Cited

It is even difficult to keep Germans informed of current events, because of the shortage of allocated newsprint, he said. "During the Neurnberg trials my paper could only publish twice a week," he said, "and then we were happy to get 16 pages of newsprint all week."

"We need a flood of pamphlets, books, articles—all positively, irrefutably documented—and cheap enough for the man on the street, on such topics as: Did Hitler want war? Was it Hitler's intent to destroy the Polish nation? What really happened to the Jews?"

Then, he said, there will be an answer for the average man who asks for proof when he is told of the evils of the Hitler regime.

He stressed the importance of the Hosbach documents, vital evidence in the Neurnberg trials. They are documents of a high-ranking Nazi official who attended secret policy conferences when Hitler blueprinted his schoeme for world conquest.

Such documents, the publisher insists, should be reproduced prolifically, made available to all German educators, writers, intellectuals, politicians, and other leaders.

Need Research Center

Schoningh believes the Allies should help establish a German research center, to probe into the orginis and history of nazism. This would be the academic fountainhead for documented information to convince the people, he asserted.

Other media, such as radio and films, should be utilized by Germans themselves to sell democracy on the basis of sound understanding of the German mind today, he suggested.

For example, he said, the Allies after the war showed films depicting atrocities in concentration camps. At first attendance was terrific. But the commentary indicted the entire German people, also, not just the regime and its leaders.

"The terrifying impact was wasted," he is convinced, "because the approach was psychologically unwise."

Suggests Sequences

He suggested such documentary sequences be knitted together:

Scenes from the "Twenties of July," filmed at Hitler's behest. It shows the trial and hanging of German military leaders whose plot to kill Hitler was foiled.

One sequence shows a German officer being asked by an hysterical judge why he as an officer turned against his Fuehrer. He replies: "Because I was shocked and horrified by the savage murder of innocent civilians in Poland."

That scene—showing top German officers themselves were disgusted with Nazism—and a scene showing a conspirator being hung by thin wire, at Hitler's request, so his agony would be protracted—should be capped by documentary shots of Nazi atrocities, Schoningh advised.

Another idea would be to show a frenetic Nuernberg Nazi Party rally, followed by the Russian documentary on the slaughter of German youth at Stalingrad.

"Would Strike Home"

"That would strike home," he said. "They would see the connection, how it began, yes, and where it ended—in destruction."

By such means, Schoningh said he believed the Germans can positively be convinced of the evils of the old regime, a necessary prelude to their acceptance of democracy.

Meanwhile, he said, Russian propaganda has happily failed in the western zone. This was because the recent currency reform has raised the western zone standards of living while Russian maltreatment of Germans in their zone has been made known, by word of mouth, throughout the country.

'... Facts, Facts, Facts ...'

GERMAN JOURNALIST—Franz Joseph Schoningh, editor of the largest newspaper in southern Germany, wants his countryfolk to be given the facts about World War II

German Chief Calls Stalin War Criminal

Gelsenkirchen, Germany, June 19 (AP).—Dr. Kurt Schumacher, leader of West Germany's Social Democratic Party, told a party rally today that Stalin rates second only to Hitler as a war criminal.

"Stalin is the biggest war criminal next to Hitler," Schumacher shouted to 75,000 Social Democrats. "Communism is nothing but fascism painted red."

Schumacher jabbed at the Western occupation powers and their program for dismantling plants they consider to be war potentials.

"The Communists are helped by the boners the Western Allies make in Germany," he said.

Then he accused the Catholic Church of demanding power, and added: "We do not need a fifth occupying power in Germany."

The Social Democrats, with a platform for nationalizing basic industries, are campaigning hard for a majority in the West German Parliament to be elected August 14.

Schumacher called Russia's policy in Germany "the most brutal" and its reparations demands the heaviest of all. He then also attacked the reparations program of the Western Powers, contending the values the United States and Britain are placing on the reparations they take out of Germany "are so low that they could buy the entire German economy for one billion marks (300 million dollars) by figuring values at the same rate."

the Russians must pull their forces out of Romania and Hungary.

There still are skeptics who fear a last-minute hitch, and it is true Vishinsky must consult Moscow on one or two more points before he can approve the planned communique.

Fail to Unify Germany

It is also true that the implementation of agreements is more important than agreements themselves and that something may arise to continue misunderstanding or manifest bad faith.

The four powers, nevertheless, are close together tonight. They failed to unify Germany or Berlin. They failed to write a peace treaty for Germany. But they apparently have found a way to live together despite their disputes; in the Austrian problem they have come to solutions they have not been able to attain for more than two years.

Both results, it seems, are the outcome of a command decision reached in Moscow some months ago and, whatever the motives, they are welcomed by the United States, Britain and France if they come to mean what they appear to mean.

Denazification Probe Asked

By the United Press

Senator Gillette (D., Iowa) yesterday urged an immediate congressional investigation of the denazification program in Germany to prevent what he called a threatened revival of fascism.

Speaking over local radio station WWDC, Gillette revealed that he and three other Senators are supporting a bipartisan resolution to authorize such an inquiry. He criticized "short-sighted, irresponsible and somewhat stupid" American policies in Germany and said there are indications that "some of our people have been carrying on mutual admiration societies with old German nationalists and newer Nazis."

Hungary Reds Declare Rajk American Spy

Budapest, Hungary, June 19 (U.P.).—Laszlo Rajk, 40, former Minister of Foreign Affairs, was denounced today as an American spy by the official organ of the Hungarian Workers (Communist) Party.

Arrest of Rajk, who also had been Minister of the Interior, and 19 "accomplices" was announced yesterday.

The newspaper Szabad Nep, in an editorial today, asserted that the United States espionage service had succeeded in hiring Rajk after its other "Fascist agents" in this country had been caught.

Rajk's fall from grace came to public notice June 10 when his name was omitted from the list of new cabinet members.

Five days later it was announced he had been expelled from the Communist Party. That announcement said he was connected with a spy ring working for a "foreign power."

Rajk and his 19 "accomplices" were specifically identified as "American agents" by Szabad Nep. The newspaper claimed the United States had hired "many leftovers" from Hungary's prewar Fascist regime to work for its intelligence service, but added they all had been discovered.

"After losing all their Hungarian agents, the imperialists turned to their last and most dangerous weapon," the newspaper said. "They hired for their secret service those who had succeeded in infiltrating into the Communist Party."

Rajk is a veteran middle European Communist. He fought in the Spanish Civil War.

Greeks Aided In Rebel War By Tito Revolt

By Edward E. Bomar
Associated Press Reporter

Athens reports to the State Department indicated yesterday that the American-advised Greek Army, profiting from Tito's split with the Cominform, is gaining the upper hand for the first time over the Communist guerillas.

Guerilla combat forces have been reduced from a peak of 25,000 to around 18,000, with women making up an estimated 40 per cent of the fighters, reports said. A substantial number of others are said to be Greek boys, recently returned from Communist camps in the Balkans.

Red Front Cracked

Yugoslavia has reduced its pressure against Greece, although officially it still supports the guerillas. Marshal Tito's feud with Moscow cracked the former Communist solid front, and diplomatic officials said this, coupled with Greek army military successes, has helped produce these developments:

1. More than 100,000 refugees from former guerilla-harassed areas have been released from relief camps and returned to their former homes to till crops.

2. The Greek government has felt sufficiently reassured to free hundreds of political exiles after indoctrinating them in a "model camp" on the Island of Makronisos. The exiles, suspected Communist sympathizers, numbered about 15,000 at the peak.

Guerilla Morale Hit

3. Guerilla morale has been hard hit by defeat in the Tito quarrel, the ousting of rebel Gen. Markos Vafiades, and a Communist proposal to incorporate part of Greece into a Macedonian state.

Responsible officials said active fighting this spring has been confined largely to the Gramos Mountains area along the Albanian border. One guerilla pocket in the vicinity of Corona is supported entirely from Yugoslavia, however, and the Greeks have had to keep substantial forces along the Yugoslav line, even though this front has become largely static.

The Yugoslavs are keeping a tight check on the guerillas operating along the frontier, and permit movement back and forth across the border only at specified control points. Lateral movements of the rebels from Bulgaria, Romania and Albania into Yugoslavia have been halted.

Man Wounds Italian Prince During Mass

Rome, June 19 (U.P.). — Prince Alessandro Torlonia was shot and gravely wounded during a church service today by a farmer who had recently been fired by the Torlonia family.

The 24-year-old prince was rushed to a clinic with bullet wounds in his chest and groin.

The farmer, Pietro Amori, 45, was arrested. He had been in custody earlier, after he had threatened to kill "one of the Torlonia princes," but was released.

This morning, Amori waited in front of the small Church of San Rocco, where the Torlonia family attends mass every Sunday. Police said he entered the church shortly after the prince.

Just after mass started, police said, Amori whipped out a pistol and shot young Torlonia. Two other persons were slightly wounded by the farmer's bullets.

[The prince is a cousin of Prince Don Alessandro Torlonia, who visited here in 1935 with his bride, the Infanta Beatrice, daughter of former King Alfonso of Spain. Prince Don Alessandro had an American mother, the former Elsie Moore of New York City.—Editor's note.]

Indonesia Pact Seems Near

Batavia, Java, June 19 (AP).—The Dutch and the Indonesian Republic today appeared to be nearing a compromise solution on a deadlock over a cease-fire order to Indonesian guerillas.

Lack of agreement on this order is the only thing barring return of the Republican Government to its capital at Jogjakarta, according to an informed source, who predicted agreement in the next few days.

Mao Seeks Friendly Relations

Shanghai (Monday), June 20 (U.P.).—Communist Chief Mao Tze-tung has announced that Red China soon will become a "people's democratic republic," willing to establish diplomatic relations with any "truly friendly" foreign state, the Communist New China news agency announced today.

The agency reported a speech by Mao at the opening of a preparatory session in Peiping of the "Political Consultative Conference." Mao said the conference will proclaim the new state, which will be governed by a coalition of left-wing groups, and elect its government.

Mao was quoted as saying that the "new China" would be willing to establish diplomatic relations with any foreign nation which would boycott the Nationalist Government and "adopt a truly friendly attitude toward the Chinese people."

He did not indicate how soon the conference would be ready to go to work.

The agency dispatch quoted Mao as saying the coalition regime would include representatives of all "democratic" parties, people's groups, and Chinese communities abroad.

Mao claimed that Red forces during the past three years had "eliminated" 5,500,000 government soldiers, leaving the Nationalists an army of only 1,500,000.

400 Students Sign Loyalty Oaths In AEC

By the United Press

More than 400 out of 497 atomic energy fellowship recipients have signed loyalty oaths since congressional disclosure that at least three alleged Communists had received the grants, the Atomic Energy Commission announced yesterday.

A commission spokesman said that while reports from all 497 are not in, several students have refused to sign the pledge. He did not reveal their names and said full details on their reasons have not been compiled.

Plans are under way in Congress to bar Federal atomic research fellowships to students who refuse to take non-Communist oaths. The commission installed the loyalty oaths and promised to grant no more fellowships to Communists after the issue was aired in the joint Senate-House Atomic Committee.

The Federation of American Scientists attacked the loyalty oath requirement yesterday as a threat to "freedom of inquiry."

Its administrative committee, which met at Cambridge, Mass., last weekend, announced its opposition through its office here and asserted that training for basic research must be kept free of "political and security considerations" in order to develop "the unconventional thinking necessary to expand both basic and applied knowledge."

"Loyalty affidavits are valueless as security precautions but dangerous because of the state of mind they reflect and impose," it added.

The demand for loyalty oaths for Atomic Commission fellows came after Congressmen disclosed that Hans Freistadt, a Communist student at the University of North Carolina, had been granted a fellowship to do nonsecret research under a commission grant. Commission Chairman David E. Lilienthal admitted later that three alleged Communists had received such fellowships.

By the United Press

President Clifford J. Durr of the National Lawyers Guild demanded yesterday that President Truman name a special citizens' committee to investigate FBI methods revealed by the Judith Coplon spy trial.

The former Federal Communications Commissioner said that while no detailed analysis of the FBI reports produced as evidence at the trial is available, newspaper accounts indicate a "dangerous trend toward a police state."

He added that the FBI is turning the country "into a Nation of snoopers," and "this is an issue that demands a searching inquiry."

There seemed little likelihood Mr. Truman would reply. At his news conference last Thursday he laughed at a reporter's suggestion that he might appoint a commission to make a "quiet, closed study" of the FBI.

Hits Coplon to Resume Defense

Mr. Truman asked the reporter whether he ever had heard of a really quiet, closed investigation in Washington.

Miss Coplon, 28-year-old Barnard College graduate and suspended Justice Department analyst, is scheduled to resume her personal defense today against charges that she stole Government secrets to send to Moscow.

She denies that she ever committed espionage or that she even meant to. The FBI reports were offered in evidence two weeks ago at the insistence of Defense Attorney Archibald Palmer after the Government contended that data slips found in Miss Coplon's purse were copied from them.

Among other things, the reports quoted FBI informants as saying that Mrs. Edward Condon, wife of the director of the United States Bureau of Standards, had arranged a "contact" between a suspected Russian agent and a business man who later killed himself.

"Police State" Cited

Durr, who has feuded with the FBI before, said that sort of thing smacked of police state methods. He also said that much of the information could have been obtained only through illegal wire tapping and he accused the agency of "hounding and harassing" law-abiding citizens.

"The FBI collects and officially records all manner of gossip, rumor and hearsay," Durr charged in a statement. "It pries into the family and social lives of American citizens.

Durr's previous clash with the FBI occured when he still was with the FCC. At that time he accused the law enforcement agency of sending the commission 'baseless gossip' about persons in the radio industry.

The FBI promptly announced it would cease sending such material to the commission. It changed its mind only after the FCC wrote a formal leter requesting the FBI to continue sending the material.

Since leaving the Government, Durr has been actively fighting the Government's loyalty program and has represented several witnesses who appeared before congressional committees investigating espionage and Communist activities.

Veterans Ask Safeguards In Loyalty Tests

Legal safeguards against "capricious" use of the loyalty review were urged in a resolution voted by Greater Washington Area Council, American Veterans Committee, yesterday.

The resolution was among several approved by the council, which concluded its fourth convention.

In other actions, the group:

1. Indorsed the Kefauver home rule bill.
2. Urged increased classroom space for Negro pupils.
3. Asked a fair employment practices act.
4. Urged an end to segregation in District playgrounds.
5. Advocated greater participation by AVC members in citizens associations and esimilar organizations.

The council reelected Taft Feiman, an editor of the Public Health Service, as chairman.

Besides Feiman, others chosen at the session held in the AVC clubhouse, 1751 New Hampshire ave. nw., were:

Edward Hollander, first vice chairman; George Brickelmaier, second vice chairman; Rennert Nicol, corresponding secretary; Miss Linn Hill, recording secretary; Phillip Allen, treasurer. Eight committee chairmen also were selected.

Odlum to Testify On Arthritis Bill

Industrialist Floyd B. Odlum will testify before a House Interstate Commerce subcommittee today in support of legislation providing seven-million dollars for research and clinical study of arthritis and rheumatism.

He will urge passage of the bill on the grounds of "productive economy," pointing out that seven million victims of the diseases lose nearly 97,200,000 work days a year.

Hiss Perjury Trial Defense Opens Today

New York, June 19 (U.P.).—The defense in the Alger Hiss perjury trial will open its case Monday in an effort to prove that the one-time fair haired boy of the State Department told the truth when he said he did not filch secret government papers for a Russian spy ring.

Hiss, natty, 44-year-old former assistant to the Assistant Secretary of State, will testify. However, he is not expected to be the first witness, and probably will not be called before Wednesday. His wife, Priscilla, and stepson, Timothy Hobson, also are scheduled to testify.

Lloyd Paul Stryker, chief defense attorney, has not tipped his hand on the line of argument he will take.

The Government rested its case Friday after hearing the testimony of 33 witnesses and introducing 65 typewritten pages, four handwritten memos and two strips of microfilm which Chambers said Hiss gave him in the first three months of 1938 to deliver to a Soviet agent.

Harvard Tells Ober It Won't Punish 'Pinks'

John Ciardi, assistant professor of English composition. He was vexed because Shapley had spoken at the New York meeting of the so-called "Cultural and Scientific Conference for World Peace" at which the Nation's foreign policy was scored and because Ciardi had addressed a Progressive Party meeting in Maryland to fight the antisubversive law proposed by Ober. The law was passed, with only one disenting vote, by the 1949 Maryland Legislature and is now in force.

The two incidents, Ober wrote, gave "aid and comfort to communism (and) have made me decide not to contribute to the Harvard Law School Fund."

He conceded the right of "liberals" to fight particular laws against communism. But, he maintained, the Progressive Party attack on the bill he fathered was "not debate but vilification and falsehood—the usual Communist weapon."

Ciardi's presence at the meeting as a Harvard teacher added respectability to a group whose use by the Communists must have been known to him, Ober contended.

Sees Prestige Misused

Referring to Shapley's attendance at the New York "cultural," meeting, Ober complained:

"I do not believe that a great university can properly permit the prestige which its name gives its professors to be used in a manner hostile to our own country. . . .

"The vast majority of our people have gradually reached the conclusion that communism is not a political movement—but a criminal conspiracy."

He argued that Harvard would not permit its professors "to remain on the payroll if they engage in conferences encouraging other types of conspiracies looking toward other crimes as part of their extracurricular activity."

Position One of Trust

"Why, then, the distinction," he asked, "because the conspiracy is directed toward the forcible overthrow of our government—in short, sedition—or peacetime 'treason'? The test of a professor's actions ought not to be whether he can be actually proved guilty of a crime. Reasonable grounds to doubt his loyalty to our Government should disqualify him, for (his) position is one of trust . . ."

Ober contended that any tenure provision in faculty contracts would be abrogated in such cases.

On May 11, President Conant replied. He said that Ober's decision not to contribute to the fund was not surprising because others "have come to similar decisions because of their dislike of what Harvard professors have said publicly."

He referred Ober to the statement on academic freedom made by the late A. L. Lowell, then Harvard president, and also asked Grenville Clark to reply to Ober's letter.

Lowell said that the "objections to restraint upon what professors may say as citizens seems to me far greater than the harm done by leaving them free . . . If a university or college censors what its professors may say, if it restrains them from uttering something that it does not approve, it thereby assumes responsibility for what it permits them to say."

A university, Lowell wrote, would be "very unwise" to assume such a responsibility. The safe course, he cautioned, was to leave its faculty, insofar as expressions as private citizens go, "to be dealt with like other citizens by the public authorities according to the law of the land."

Clark prefaced his reply with the qualification that he wrote "only as an individual—although I do believe that my convictions are held by the vast majority of Harvard men."

Ober's refusal to contribute to Harvard, was subordinated by Clark to a defense of academic freedom.

Clark complained that in both the Ciardi and Shapley incidents, Ober objected not to what they said but where they said it. Ober's letter said that Ciardi's speech "was not reported to any extent and I do not know what he said."

Open Meetings Not "Plotting"

Clark pointed out both meetings "were on public issues and were open to the press. . .

"I do not see how you can expect reasonable men to think of participation in open and legal meetings as the equivalent of secret plotting to commit crime, merely because Communists or 'fellow travellers' take part in such meetings."

Clark quarreled sharply with Ober's suggestion that future faculty contracts contain a provision providing disqualification on reasonable doubt of loyalty.

Such a proviso, Clark remonstrated, would "repudiate the very essence of what Harvard stands for—the search for truth by a free and uncoerced body of students and teachers."

Clark quoted precedents from Harvard history for his arguments.

1. Professor Zechariah Chafee, jr., condemned the conduct of the trial judge in the famous Abrams sedition case of 1920 and was just as roundly condemned by many Harvard men. President Lowell defended Chafee at a Harvard trial and all charges were dropped.

Lowell Defended Laski

2. Harold J. Laski, British leftwinger and a Harvard instructor in 1919, defended the Boston police strikers in the case which won fame (and indirectly a Presidency) for Calvin Coolidge. "Feeling on that issue was terrific"; Clark wrote "Emotion ran high against the strikers' side and there were insistent demands for the dismissal of Mr. Laski. Nevertheless President Lowell stood firmly for Mr. Laski's right to speak his mind; and there was no dismissal . . ."

Clark said also that "if the professors are censored, constrained, or harassed, it affects not only themselves; it affects also those whom they teach . . ."

He asserted that the very practicalities of the Ober-suggested program ruled it out. Clark predicted it would mean a university licensing board forced to pass on every meeting attended by a teacher, a censorship of every book.

What sort of a place would the university be if it went down the Ober road? Clark asked.

"It would not, I think, require six months to destroy the morale of both our teachers and our students, and thereby our usefulness to our country," he answered.

He then turned to the matter of financial support, possibly lost by the stand he supported.

"Harvard, like any great privately-supported university, badly needs money," he wrote, but Harvard will accept no gifts on the condition, expressed or implied, that it shall compromise its tradition of freedom."

Threatened Before

Loss of subscriptions has been threatened before, Clark wrote, once to the tune of 10 million dollars. He mentioned the probable alumni choler over the New Deal influence of Supreme Court justice Felix Frankfurter, then a Harvard law professor. But from the long view, he rejoined, the support of academic freedom probably means more, not less, money in the till.

In rebuttal, Ober said Clark's letter misconstrued his letter and the Ober Comission report. The Marylander pointed to the provision that teachers would be dismissed only if, "after notice and hearing," reasonable grounds on all the evidence were found to believe a teacher disloyal.

Ober said the facts of national life were such that colleges have a duty to take "practical steps to see that Communists and other disloyal teachers are eliminated from the faculty." He proposed a program patterned after the Federal program.

Clark's letter failed to distinguish, Ober complained, among socialism or other unpopular radical issues and communism.

In re-rebuttal Clark said, "you (Ober) want to reach far beyond Communists. You want to discipline any teacher if, after hearing, 'reasonable grounds on all the evidence' are found to doubt his 'loyalty.' These are slippery terms. I affirm again that your plan implies an extensive system of detection and trial. Nothing of this character will happen under Mr. Conant."

Cut Probable In Housing Bill

of compromising the House measure along Senate bill lines developed after advance surveys indicated the House bill as now drafted might lose from 65 to 70 Southern votes.

As reported by the Banking Committee, the bill calls for 1,050,000 low-rental public housing units over the next seven years, plus a $1,500,000,000 slum clearance program and provisions to improve rural housing. A maximum of 400 million dollars a year could be spent over the next 40 years to finance public housing.

Number Cut Is Ace in Hole

The Administration's ace-in-the-hole compromise chiefly involves trimming the number of public housing units back to the 810,000 figure provided in the Senate-passed bill.

The drive to redeem a No. 1 Truman 1948 pledge has already taken on all of the trappings of a major campaign. The President led off for his side Friday with a bitter blast against the real estate lobby, which in turn has been wasting no time at the Capitol.

In an attempt to consolidate Democratic strength for the bill, a long-postponed Democratic housing caucus has been scheduled for Tuesday. There the Senate bill as a possible compromise may receive its first airing.

The first real test will come shortly after the House convenes Wednesday. It will come, after one hour's debate, controlled by the largely hostile Rules Committee.

Close Vote Possible

If the House fails to pass the rule, making the legislation in order, it will mean curtains for public housing this session. Leaders think there is no longer any danger of the bill falling by the wayside in that initial stage, but some independents say the vote may be extremely close.

The housing opposition is concentrating on the economy theme, with the current deflationary trend a chief talking point. Adherents will argue that a construction reservoir of the magnitude proposed would be more helpful than ever in a period of recession.

The 10 GOP proponents of a compromise, led by Mrs. Frances P. Bolton (R., Ohio), have introduced 10 identical bills presenting their plan.

Besides Representatives Bolton and Javits, the GOP sponsors are Clifford P. Case (N. J.), Gordon Canfield (N. J.), T. Millet Hand (N. J.), Kenneth B. Keating (N. Y.), John Davis Lodge (Conn.), William L. Pfeiffer (N. Y.), R. Walter Riehlman (N. Y.) and Thor Tollefson (Wash.).

In a joint statement yesterday they termed their proposal "the most balanced type of housing legislation."

They estimated it would cost 186 million dollars in 1950, and not more than 313 million dollars in any succeeding year.

Their joint statement said the Senate bill "goes a long way" toward meeting the need for comprehensive housing legislation, but added:

"We consider the Senate bill requires the addition of a program for privately owned housing for families of lower income who constitute 20 per cent of the almost 40 million families in the United States.

"We pioneered this provision for such families who are ineligible for public housing, yet cannot afford the private housing now offered for sale or rent. They are families in the 'gap' and include many veterans . . .

"Under our bill a beginning of over 350,000 units is practicable at rentals or prices fully within the capacity of the family income in the range of $3000 per year . . . In addition, the maximum amount of private construction under present financing plans is essential and can best be encouraged by the liberalization of titles II, III and VI of the Federal Housing Act, also provided by our bill."

Across the Capitol meanwhile, the Senate today will open a second week of debate on the heart-center controversy in the Taft-Hartley Act, 80-day national emergency strike injunctions. A plethora of compromises has been offered, ranging from plant seizure to strike action by Congress in emergencies. It may be the middle of the week before the Senate gets around to another vote.

Leading up to the midweek housing test, the House today will try to pass a number of bills by unanimous consent or rules suspension. One of the bills on the list would provide $330-a-year pay raises, retroactive to last July, to D. C. classified employes and foreign service personnel. The National Science Foundation bill is slated for House action Tuesday.

3 Senators Harbor Views On Congress Adjournment

Senator Morse (R., Oreg.) thinks the lawmakers ought to get out of Washington as soon as possible, go back home and find how their constituents feel about things. Then, he says, they should "come back in mid-October or November and try to enact some fair legislation on the great issues that concern the people." He believes his colleagues in both houses are "far behind" public opinion, he said in a speech over Radio Station WPIK, Alexandria.

Senator Tydings also took a verbal whack at fellow Senators for making long, windy floor speeches "for pure propaganda purposes" on subjects not remotely related to the business under consideration. He said he would advocate a new rule that Senate speeches stick to the subject before the body.

Right of Picketing Widened by NLRB

The National Labor Relations Board yesterday ruled unanimously the Taft-Hartley Act does not forbid legal picketing of a struck plant even if it has the same effect as a secondary boycott.

The five-member board overruled its general counsel, Robert N. Denham, in the first decision of its kind on the Taft-Hartley provision outlawing secondary boycotts. It said any other finding "might well outlaw virtually every strike."

The board announced its findings in dismissing charges of secondary boycott brought by the Pure Oil Co. against Local 346 of the CIO Oil Workers International Union at Toledo, Ohio.

Charges were filed by the company after its employes refused to load oil from a dock at the Toledo refinery of Standard Oil Co. while Local 346 was conducting a strike against Standard there last summer. Local 346 also represents the Pure Oil workers.

Denham held that picketing of the dock violated the secondary boycott ban because it prompted the Pure Oil workers to refuse to handle Pure Oil products as a means of forcing Pure Oil to stop doing business with Standard.

The board said the union's picketing was aimed chiefly at supporting its own legal strike and was confined to the premises of the struck plant. The dock is on Standard property.

It said that while the union's pressure on Standard may "also have had a secondary effect" of encouraging Pure Oil workers to stop work on Standard's premises, this "does not, in our opinion, convert lawful primary action into unlawful secondary action" under the Taft-Hartley Act.

"To hold otherwise," the board said, "might well outlaw virtually every effective strike, for a consequence of all strikes is some interference with business relationships between the struck employer and others."

The board made it clear it considers its ruling an interpretation of the Taft-Hartley Act. It said there was no "legislative history" indicating the secondary boycott ban was intended to curb "traditional primary action" by labor unions and the "only available legislative history indicates the contrary."

"We conclude that the section does not outlaw any of the primary means which unions traditionally use to press their demands on employers."

Employers Warned On T-H Stand

By the United Press

Senator Wayne L. Morse (R., Ore.) advised employers yesterday to get ready for greater Government control of their business if they continue to insist on retention of the Taft-Hartley labor-management law.

He urged Senators considering the Administration's labor legislation to compromise on a bill that will be fair both to labor and management, and "reduce to a minimum" Government participation in free collective bargaining.

"We cannot have free collective bargaining and at the same time have a Taft-Harley law, because the Taft-Hartley Law puts the Government in the business of running employer - labor - management relations," he said on a broadcast with Charles Parmer, commentator.

Third Week of Debate

The Senate begins today its third week of debate on the Administration's Taft-Hartley repealer, with crucial votes in the offing on means of handling national emergency strikes. The showdown will come when members make a choice between granting the Government power to seize struck plants, or providing court injunctions against strikes affecting the public welfare.

Administration Democrats are supporting the seizure provision on a compromise basis. But many admit privately that they have lost the fight to kill the injunction amendments offered by Senator Robert A. Taft (R., Ohio).

Morse said there must be compromise between two groups in the Senate—one seeking to pass legislation discriminating in favor of labor, and the other backing provisions which discriminate in favor of employers.

More Government Control

"I say to American employers," he continued, "that if they cling to the notion that they want the type of governmental structure as is set out in the Taft-Hartley Law, then they must get ready for one of its inevitable results—namely greater and greater and greater control on the part of Government over labor-management relations, which also means over problems of production."

Morse said the Taft-Hartley Law is splitting the country into economic classes, and planting the roots of totalitarianism, "or at least economic stateism."

He urged passage of "fair" legislation which does not put the Government on either the employer's or labor's side of the collective bargaining table, but places it in the position of serving as "impartial judge."

Asian Labor Group Voted By Anti-Reds

Geneva, Switzerland, June 19 (AP). Trade union leaders from eight Eastern countries—all opposed to the Communist-dominated World Federation of Trade Unions—voted today to set up an Asian Federation of Labor.

The eight countries represented at today's meeting, a spokesman said, have been invited to take part in talks here next weekend to found a non-Communist world organization of trade unions.

Principal sponsors of next week's meeting are the British Trade Union Congress, the AFL, the CIO and the Veterans' Federation of Trade Unions.

The eight countries joining in the Asian federation are Turkey, Japan, China, the Philippines, India, Pakistan, Iran and Indonesia. Other countries expected to join are Syria, Israel, Ceylon, Siam and Afghanistan.

Miners Return After Holiday; July Coal Strike Threatened

Pittsburgh (Monday), June 20 (U.P.).—John L. Lewis' one-week "stabilization" strike ended on schedule today amid growing fears of a new and full-fledged walkout next month.

The vanguard of Lewis' 450,000 United Mine Workers trooped back to work in the big Eastern coal mines at midnight, eager for a full week's wages before starting their annual 10-day vacation.

The miners, with an eye on contract negotiations, also were aware that this week's work may be their last for awhile. The UMW and the coal operators were entering crucial bargaining sessions for a new contract to replace the one expiring June 30.

Without a new agreement, the union's traditional "no contract, no work" policy will keep the mines closed indefinitely.

The miners were joined in the back-to-work movement by some of the 33,000 employes of the Nation's coal-hauling railroads, who were furloughed at the outset of the stabilization shutdown. Illinois Central, biggest coal hauler among Western roads, said 500 to 600 workers laid off during the strike would be called back immediately.

Deadlocked U. S. Steel, CIO, Meet Again Today

Pittsburgh, June 19 (AP).—U. S. Steel Corp. and the CIO-United Steel Workers meet again Monday to try and break a deadlock which threatens contract negotiations.

Philip Murray, president of both the CIO and the Steel Workers, is insisting the negotiations deal with pensions. But "Big Steel," which sets the pattern for the industry, says it doesn't believe the contract reopening clause permits discussion of anything but wages.

Murray's answer to this is that pensions are part of wages. That's where the matter stands. If it can't be resolved there's a strong possibility the Steel Workers will exercise their contractual right to strike July 16.

AFL Survey Optimistic On Economy

The American Federation of Labor said yesterday unemployment may rise to five millions by July but the economy is so healthy and vigorous that "a serious business recession" is almost "impossible."

In its publication, "Labor's Monthly Survey," the AFL took a generally bright view of the economic situation.

It said there are certain dangers, however, and declared that policies followed by unions, management and Government in this period are "all important." The AFL said it is vital that wages move "steadily upward" this year to restore and increase consumer buying.

But it said wage increases should now be based on "past or future increases in productivity" to prevent undue rises in costs—and that company earning power should be considered.

It proposed that unions cooperate with management through union-management production committees to "prevent waste, save expense, cut costs, improve production." A wage increase, the AFL said, may depend on such a plan.

AFL unions were advised to get the facts on the employer's financial condition.

"Perhaps your employer's prospects are excellent," the publication said, "but if his profit margin is being squeezed by price declines your future will be more secure if you help him improve his competitive position."

On the Nation's economic prospects, the AFL said the current price cuts are a "healthy development." It said readjustment after any war is difficult, "but there is no reason now to expect any such collapse as that of 1921."

Following are the "strong sustaining forces" which the AFL said make a serious recession "almost impossible":

Employment is still very high, 12,500,000 above prewar; unemployment in May was 3,300,000 (1,500,000 above last year).

Industrial production is still 75 per cent above prewar.

Unions have kept workers' wages in pace with price increases and union contracts protect wage rates against cuts.

Workers' buying power is much stronger than in previous times of price decline, "though it must be still stronger to lift consumer demand."

Unemployment compensation gives workers partial income while unemployed.

Bank deposits are guaranteed by the Government.

Building construction this year is continuing at last year's high level.

Government spending, including European aid and military programs, will continue at levels of more than 40 billion dollars.

Consumer income, though inadequate, is still only 4 per cent below the postwar peak.

The AFL also said it is vital that the Government, management and unions avoid any action that would start price inflation again.

47 Billions in 10-Year Period Listed as Need of U. S. Roads

Chicago, June 19 (AP).—An estimate that 47 billion dollars will be needed during a 10-year period to correct the Nation's highway deficiencies was advanced today.

This figure is based on a survey in 15 States by the American Public Works Association.

It said detailed studies showed $16,900,000,000 is needed in the States during the next 10 to 20 years "to put all roads, streets and highways in condition to carry traffic with reasonable efficiency and safety."

The national figure was conditioned on the same "pattern of deficiencies."

The growing number of motor vehicles in use and frequent operation of overweight trucks were given as factors in deteriorating pavements.

The association also pointed out "the ratio of trucks and buses to passenger vehicles rose from 1 to 7.3 in 1920 to a 1948 ration of 1 truck or bus to 4.5 passenger cars."

Paraguay Ex-President Faces Fraud Charges

Asuncion, Paraguay, June 19 (U.P.). The government announced last night that former President J. Natalicio Gonzalez will be tried on charges of profiteering and fraud.

The office of President Felipe Molas Lopez said the charges are based on a statement by Aristides Toranzo, manager of the Bank of Paraguay, alleging Gonzalez' purchase of the newspaper El Pais was "irregular."

lies out of their wet homes for the night.

"The town had no telephones to the outside. Its only electric power is a Diesel light plant loaned to the school by the H. C. Price Construction Co., which is digging a gas pipeline through the area."

The flood waters poured down suddenly and violently in darkness early Saturday. Heavy rains preceded them. Then, a cloudburst that dumped inches of rain in a short period sent cascades of water down every slope and rivulet.

The floods hit the towns without warning and hundreds managed to escape only with what they were wearing. Some managed to survive by clutching floating debris until they struggled to higher ground miles away.

State police in both Virginia and West Virginia said they don't know where to look for some of the persons still unaccounted for. They expressed hope some may be marooned in isolated areas and unable to report themselves.

National Guardsmen were patrolling in some of the stricken communities to prevent looting.

As roads were being opened, Virginia State Highway Department officials at Richmond received estimates that damage to the roads in that State will cost at least $225,000 to repair, including washed-out bridges. Some temporary and portable Army bridges will be used to keep traffic moving immediately.

Sheriff C. L. Pradt at Moorfield estimated damage in his county at one million dollars.

2 Hospitals for Sale At 'Bargain Prices'

"Sure I'm beautiful to you in this setting, but how will I look to you back in Brooklyn?"

Two hospitals, a health center and a fire station in the Washington area are among facilities up for sale by the Federal Works Agency at "bargain prices."

They are included in a list of 113 Federally-owned properties to be disposed of. All of the projects were built with Lanham Act funds during the war years, Federal Works Administrator Jess Larson said yesterday in releasing the list.

The Washington area projects are: Arlington Hospital, built at a cost of $661,439; Suburban Hospital in Bethesda, Md., which originally cost $648,168; the Arlington Health Department $163,443, and the Fairlington fire house in Arlington, $12,237.

Also slated for disposal by FWA is equipment installed with Lanham Act funds in the nurses' home of Providence Hospital, costing $18,902 and an Arlington County trunk sewer costing $97,310.

All of the projects are now being leased from FWA by their present occupants, Larson said. Officials of the two hospitals already have started negotiations with the agency for purchase of the buildings at prices far below the original cost.

According to Arlington Hospital Administrator, John J. Anderson, the Government and the hospital have tentatively agreed on a $125,000 purchase price, and a drive possibly will be held this year to raise funds for the project. Anderson said the tentative agreement requires the hospital to pay $30,000 down and the balance in five years.

Trustees of Suburban Hospital have offered FWA $130,000 for their building, and are negotiating an agreement under which they propose to pay $30,000 down and $10,000 a year for 10 years.

According to Arlington officials, the county has taken no steps to acquire either the health center, the firehouse or the sewer. Purchase of the health center might involve complications, it was pointed out, since the building is used by both county and State personnel.

Providence Hospital authorities said they had not been informed of the FWA proposal, and had taken no steps to acquire the nursing home equipment.

Indian Head Project For Sale to Tenants

The Potomac Heights war housing development at Indian Head, Md., will be offered for sale to qualified nonprofit groups of tenants and prospective occupants starting today, according to the Public Housing Administration.

Purchase offers must be made within 30 days by groups composed of persons now living on the 485-unit project and those who intend to live there, PHA said. To be eligible, each group must submit an application signed by members equaling at least 25 per cent of the number of units in the project, with a $50 good faith deposit for each signer.

Potomac Heights was built in 1942 to house war workers at the naval powder factory at Indian Head.

Senate Unit Opens Gas Quiz June 27

Chairman Maybank (D., S. C.) said yesterday that two major motorists' organizations will lead off at the Senate Banking Committee's investigation of gasoline prices.

He said the American Automobile Association and Keystone Automobile Club will testify Monday, June 27, as the committee's small business subcommittee begins looking into recent gasoline price increases which some members feel are not justified.

Hot-Water Microbes Reveal New Secrets of Germ World

Vancouver, British Columbia, June 19 (AP).—Microbes which live in temperatures hotter than boiling water are revealing new things about the germ world.

Hundreds of kinds of these organisms have been brought up from the bottoms of oil wells 10,000 feet or more below the surface of the earth. They seem to challenge the long-accepted idea that boiling water is sure death to germs.

Actually, however, boiling water still is a good means of killing bacteria—at the earth's surface. But the deeper they live the more heat they can stand.

Dr. Claude E. ZoBell of the Scripps Institution of Oceanography at La Jolla, Calif., told about them at a closing meeting of the American Association for the Advancement of Science.

Pressure is the secret of their toughness. At 10,000 feet, the depth of many oil wells, the weight of the earth produces a pressure of more than 4000 pounds per square inch. This pressure in turn causes heat, which at that level is about 200 degrees.

Oil from the bottom of deep wells comes up almost boiling hot. In it, Dr. ZoBell said, are many kinds of microbes.

To check the results, he rigged up an instrument for creating extreme pressures and temperatures approaching 400 degrees.

Some varieties of bacteria flourished in that heat.

Dr. ZoBell then subjected surface bacteria to high pressures. Nearly all were killed.

He said the lethal effect was due to a nutritional change rather than to a cooking effect.

These experiments probably explain in part why some of the deep-dwelling bacteria produce hydrocarbons out of carbon and water. They also give added support to the theory that bacteria subjected to great pressures many ages ago underwent metabolic changes which caused them to produce hydrocarbons which eventually became petroleum.

Drug Found Easing Blood Pressure

Philadelphia, June 19 (AP).—The University of Pennsylvania announced today the development of a new drug which doctors say has been used to bring about decrease in blood pressure.

Penn's School of Medicine said the drug, technically known as dihydroergocormine, was developed by four university physicians engaged in the drive to combat heart and circulatory diseases—the Nation's No. 1 killer.

The announcement said the drug, developed from a fungus which sometimes grows on rye and other grasses, is injected into the muscles and temporarily lowers general blood pressure.

The doctors added that the drug is not recommended for routine treatment in high blood pressure cases, explaining that its effect is only temporary. But, they reported, the drug is an "important step toward the development of an effective therapy for the treatment" of high blood pressure.

Thank The Sales Tax

The Senate Appropriations Committee has voted to restore most of the cuts made in the District budget by the House prior to enactment of the new revenue law. Now that the money is available to meet the District's most pressing needs, the chances are excellent that the House as well as the Senate will approve this liberalized supply bill. Under it the Health Department will receive nearly $700,000 more than the amount allowed by the House. Appropriations previously made for beginning construction of a new Spingarn High School, which had been rescinded by the House, will be restored. The Welfare Department will be able to maintain relief payments at present levels, inadequate though these are. Items in the Senate bill add up to the imposing sum of $103,132,000—only $747,000 below the expenditure recommendations of the District Commissioners.

The Senate bill makes no provisions for pay increases for District employes, because it lacks authority to do so in the absence of enabling legislation. However, when the pay increase bills are passed, as they undoubtedly will be, an additional 10 or 11 million dollars will be added to budgetary outlays for the next fiscal year. Since the sales tax is expected to yield sufficient revenue to defray the cost of salary increases retroactive to July, 1948, the city will be in possession of surplus revenues from this source in the fiscal year 1951. Consequently, the Senate Appropriations Committee advises the District Commissioners to consider earmarking some five million dollars of sales tax receipts for schools, welfare institutions, sewers and other improvements. Thanks to the sales tax, the District is now financially able to discharge its obligations to its employes, cover the costs of essential services reasonably well, and possibly speed up its lagging capital improvement program.

Crisis At Prague

The pattern of battle recently developed at Budapest between the Roman Catholic Primate and the Communist rulers is now being repeated in detail at Prague. By every sign it will be but a matter of days or possibly hours before Archbishop Beran becomes, like Cardinal Mindszenty, a prisoner of the Communist political police. Whether the archbishop, too, will one day reemerge from prison to play the leading role at another propaganda trial remains to be seen, but he has publicly instructed his followers to disregard any confessions that may be issued in his name. However, the terror in Prague is evidently neither as complete nor as efficacious as it was in Budapest on the eve of the seizure of Cardinal Mindszenty. This is shown in the fact that the archbishop was able to leave his palace and repair to a monastery outside the city for a celebration of the feast of Corpus Christi and that several thousand persons found courage to gather there in an impressive demonstration of loyalty.

He also found means to smuggle from the palace a pastoral letter attacking the "anti-Christian ideology" of the state and asserting that in matters affecting the freedom of the church further compromises were impossible. Thus Archbishop Beran, like Cardinal Mindszenty, has met the challenge head-on, and by totalitarian logic, the regime has no choice but to destroy him. It is probable that the Communist leaders would have preferred to move slowly and cautiously, suppressing some church organizations and activities piecemeal, and assuming control and direction of others, with the view to forcing an ultimate breach with Rome and the establishment of a national church that would be a submissive instrument of propaganda and government, such as the Orthodox churches appear to have become in most of the satellite countries.

But while such prelates as Archbishop Beran remain these tactics are destined to failure. As long as the church is able to assert its independence it must gain strength and influence as the only remaining highly organized center of resistance to a regime that is hated as well as feared by the great majority of the people. Of course Protestant groups in Hungary, Bulgaria and perhaps also in Czechoslovakia, have also offered resistance and have their own lists of martyrs, but the Catholic resistance has been more effective because, like communism, it is organized on an international basis.

In short, the consolidation of totalitarian rule in any of the satellite countries where the church continues to exist is impossible. Thus the crisis in Czechoslovakia is certain to be followed by another in Poland, where resistance to the regime is even more formidable. Nor has it yet been shown that, with all the resources of terror at their command, the advantage in this conflict necessarily rests with the Communist rulers.

Cost Of Public Housing

President Truman threw a good deal of righteous indignation into his letter to Speaker Rayburn on the public housing bill. The letter is one of the most effective statements of the case for slum clearance and low-rental housing that we have seen. It blasts the real estate lobby's propaganda by a skillful combination of facts and common sense. If members of the House will read this statement with open minds along with the flimsy reply of the National Association of Real Estate Boards, the housing measure will be in no danger of defeat.

One has to begin with the fact that slums are a cancerous growth in every American city. They can be eliminated only by governmental action. Experience has shown that each city can best deal with its own slum problem, using the powers of eminent domain, but the cities must have financial aid if they are to undertake any extensive rehousing programs. Such Federal aid is provided in H. R. 4009, soon to be considered by the House. It is true that this program will cost a good deal of money, but there is no excuse whatever for the gross exaggeration of the costs in which the real estate interests have indulged.

The chief items of expense are (1) grants to the localities to aid them in wiping out their mistakes of the past in permitting residential areas to deteriorate into slums and (2) rental subsidies to enable low-income families to occupy the new housing that is provided. If the job of eliminating these cancerous growths in our cities is to be done, these expenses cannot be avoided. Crime-breeding neighborhoods cannot be cleared, replanned and redeveloped without providing decent housing for the displaced slum dwellers. It is not necessary, as the President points out, that the new projects be located in the areas that are reclaimed. Often the cleared land can be more appropriately used for parks, schools or commercial buildings in accord with city-wide redevelopment planning. The important point is to remove the slums and to relieve the pressure on other blighted housing by providing decent low-rental dwellings at least as numerous as the slum houses that are destroyed.

It would be possible, of course, to make these new projects self-sustaining. But experience has shown that if they are to serve their primary purpose of rehousing the displaced slum dwellers and of relieving the critical pressure upon low-rental housing, the rents which their occupants can afford to pay must be in some measure supplemented by a Federal subsidy. In its effort to make certain that there will be no competition between public and private housing, the Senate provided that the projects authorized may be occupied only by families with incomes 20 per cent below what is necessary to afford decent private housing. The result will necessarily be to increase the amount of subsidy required.

We hope the House will pass the bill. But it could reduce the amount of the rental subsidies by eliminating this unwise restriction and allowing city housing authorities to accommodate any family now living in substandard housing, without trying to maintain this artificial and discriminatory 20 per cent margin. If the argument of real estate interests that the program would discourage thrift had been aimed at this provision of the bill, it would have been dead right. For families living in public housing are not going to increase their earnings, if the result would be to throw them into the no-man's land between public housing and the lowest rentals that private housing can provide. Minority Leader Martin and his friends who are worried about the cost of the bill could most profitably direct their efforts toward elimination of this restriction that will make subsidies unnecessarily excessive.

Still Trigger Happy

The furor over Representative Wood's textbook inquiry comes as a reminder that, when they were about to yield control over the Committee on Un-American Activities last December, Messrs. Mundt and Nixon came forth with a proposed code of fair procedure. One of their strictures was that in the future no subcommittee report should be made public without the approval of the full committee. In the present instance Chairman Wood did not release a report but he launched an obnoxious investigation apparently without any approval other than his own.

The present committee was extensively reorganized to rescue it from the odium that clung to its predecessor. It was supposedly packed with level-headed members who would counteract Mr. Wood's tendency to go off half-cocked. What little work it has done this year has been, for the most part, on a higher plane than the operations of the old committee. But so long as it has a chairman who is trigger happy, and no rules of fair procedure by which he must abide, the old abuses are likely to be repeated.

Mr. Wood says that he does not understand what all the fuss is about. Can he be ignorant of the fact that education under our system is a local responsibility? Is he so naive that he did not realize that any attempt on the part of Congress or one of its committees to say what textbooks are fit to be used in our schools would be regarded as an insult to boards of education and State legislatures as well as to students and their parents all over the land? This very assertion advertises his unfitness to be chairman of a committee concerned with the preservation of our way of life.

Apparently five of the committee's nine members are opposed to the letter its chairman sent out to colleges for information as to their textbooks in social science courses. Obviously any reasonable code of procedure would require a vote of the full committee before an investigation of this sort could be launched. When the present session of Congress began there was much talk of such reforms, and Majority Leaders Lucas and McCormack introduced a resolution providing a code of fair procedure for congressional investigating committees. Little has been heard of it since. Mr. Wood's blunder ought to remind the two majority leaders that action in this field is no less urgent than when their proposal was made.

Sesquicentennial

Refusal of the House to vote $2,000,000 for the proposed Freedom Fair in connection with Washington's sesquicentennial throws an important issue into the lap of the national organizations and groups that are interested in this celebration. Is the 150th anniversary of the Nation's Capital to pass unnoticed? If not, private groups will have to bestir themselves, for Congress has washed its hands of the proposed Freedom Fair. In the past it has spent millions on great celebrations in other cities, but apparently the House is allergic to any emphasis on the achievements of democracy in a city to which it has denied home rule for three quarters of a century.

We do not know whether private groups can command sufficient backing to justify going ahead with the celebration planned by the Washington Sesquicentennial Commission. But it seems to us that the possibility is worth exploring. The commission has asked the District Commissioners for help in securing a $3,000,000 loan from District funds. The House may be no more inclined to authorize such a loan than it was to appropriate Federal funds. Meanwhile time is growing short. If there are national groups that are able and willing to step into the breach and carry forward an appropriate celebration, their suggestions ought to be promptly forthcoming. The basic question is whether the large organized groups which look to Washington as the pulsing center of our great experiment in self-government wish to pass by an excellent opportunity to celebrate its achievements.

Utopia, 1984 Model

If there is any remaining doubt that the notion of progress as a constant and beneficent principle in human history is now thoroughly dead, that doubt should be dispelled by Mr. George Orwell's new and fearful fantasy called Nineteen Eighty Four. A comparison of the book with such a work as Bellamy's Looking Backward, written in 1887, shows how profoundly the mid-twentieth century Weltanschauung differs from that of only two generations ago.

Bellamy, peering prophetically into the future, saw that by A. D. 2000 the combination of technology and socialism would have produced a universe very much like a modern luxury hotel. Peering with a much shorter telescope, and only 37 years ahead, Mr. Orwell sees a world in which the combination of technology, psychiatry and the lust of power have completed the teleological perfection of the police state and souls as well as bodies have become the property of an ever-watchful and remorseless dictatorship.

For one thing, the dictatorship has accomplished the complete abolition of privacy. Every waking moment of the lives of the inhabitants is under the scrutiny of the dreaded Thought Police. Among the devices employed for this purpose is a kind of two-way television whereby all symptoms of discontent, such as changes of facial expression or lack of enthusiasm at the daily mass calesthenics or hate programs are instantly noted. Children are trained from infancy in the art and duty of spying on their parents and betraying any deviation from the proscribed norms of behavior or thought. But, indeed, thought is rapidly being made impossible through the system by the systematic destruction of language and the introduction of a new semantics whereby all surviving words incorporated into the official language called Newspeak are made simultaneously to incorporate opposite meanings.

Mr. Orwell's narrative plot has to do with the case history of a "thought criminal" named Winston Smith, a member of the "outer party" and employe of the Ministry of Truth. His job is to falsify all existing records with each change in the party line. This is easier than it sounds, since all records earlier than 1960 have been totally destroyed, and it is merely necessary to revise the subsequently printed books and newspapers. Thus another device whereby the dictatorship has assured its perpetuation in power is the total abolition of history. Nevertheless, Winston Smith's job fills him with an unholy and counterrevolutionary curiosity about the past. His furtive investigations, and even his love affair, though contrary to party rules, are tolerated for a time by the Thought Police. He is even encouraged to believe in the existence of an underground within the party and to seek contact with it.

The methods of mental and physical torture whereby the spirit of Winston Smith is broken by the Thought Police and his personality destroyed are Mr. Orwell's story, and it is perhaps unfair to summarize it here. But we think we can guarantee that it will curl your hair and coagulate your blood—not indeed because Mr. Orwell has told it with any great art or skill, but simply because it is at no very great remove from present realities.

"Teaching Communism"

In your June 11 editorial on "Teaching Communism" you rightly state that a question currently agitating a great many Americans, is "How to provide the kind of instruction that enables young people to appreciate the value of democratic institutions."

I agree with the National Education Association idea that "an understanding of alien systems of government is more likely to result in rejection of all forms of totalitarianism than the denial of the opportunity to learn about them."

But I am afraid that this problem will not be solved in our public schools. In my opinion that requires the realization, by individuals, of dynamic democracy—a vibrant enthusiasm about the spiritual values of our way of life. That would, in turn, require a new kind of education to help the individual appreciate and value them, and learn to translate them into daily living—a truly formidable and difficult task which our public schools could never undertake.

FBI Standards

Drew Pearson made the statement recently that the FBI had listened to secret conversations concerning Judith Coplon through microphone hidden aboard the SS Batory which carried Gerhardt Eisler out of this country. Mr. Pearson's motive in revealing the sensational information is not questioned. But the nature of the report is worthy of consideration. Undoubtedly it was furnished by the FBI. The question is, why was it released just at this time when the prosecution's face is so red and when the Government is resting its "case" against the Coplon girl?

If the FBI really had the Batory under such close surveillance that long ago and they suspected that it was being used for such unconscionable purposes, how did it occur that Eisler escaped on it? These inconsistencies weaken the reliability of the report and tend to corroborate the wisdom of the judge's ruling to admit in evidence all pertinent data in the interest of justice to both sides.

One may ask, what standard of qualification does the Department of Justice use when employing a man to investigate activity? And who determines that standard? How can we be sure that an enemy has not worked his way into the FBI itself?

Secrecy In Democracy

The other day Dr. J. Robert Oppenheimer told a Senate committee that the best personal security is not to hire anybody and the best way to guard things is to lock everything up and not let anybody in. While, as Dr. Oppenheimer also observed, you won't get much done that way, nevertheless it may be the only way in a free State such as ours to keep a Government secret.

The idea is that the absolute secrecy needed to protect a secret such as atomic energy is primarily the prerogative of a police state, where people are not free but are subject to whatever regulations the police may prescribe in what they consider to be the interest of the country or of the regime in power. In Russia, a police state, you can attain or at least approach this secrecy; you could do it in Hitler's Germany, you can do it today in Franco's Spain. Those are the states where there is no habeas corpus; where a man can be picked up without search warrant and imprisoned indefinitely without charge. They are the states where the principal implement of government is fear. People don't tell secrets which the government wants kept secret because they are afraid.

In this country, you may get a man fired, but, though losing one's job can be unpleasant, it isn't the sort of possibility that makes a man lie awake nights in dread of what the next day may bring. The thought is that, just possibly, we are trying to do something with regard to the secret of atomic energy which in this country is candidly impossible. Secrecy, or the sort of secrecy we are trying to maintain on atomic energy may be incompatible with free government.

The problem today is not so much what has happened already but what we shall do if we discover that, under constitutional regulations, we are not maintaining the secret.

Will we go deeper into the maze of security restrictions, or will we discover, and be guided by the conclusion, that effective regulations are incompatible with democratic government? In the police state it is deemed to be axiomatic that the innocent must suffer for the sins of the evildoers. In our thinking, however, it is considered better that the guilty should escape than that the innocent be punished.

Bridge Statues

I have often been disappointed when crossing the Arlington Memorial Bridge, to find that the two pedestals on the Washington end of the bridge, erected years ago to carry the equestrian groups of "Valor" and "Sacrifice," are still vacant.

I can recall vividly that the winning designs for these groups, the work of Leo Friendlander, internationally known sculptor, were reproduced in Washington newspapers and numerous other publications throughout the country in 1932. The commission to execute these groups for the Arlington Memorial Bridge was awarded to this sculptor by our National Fine Arts Commission at that time, as the result of a Nation-wide contest, in which most of our outstanding sculptors participated. In 1933, these same designs by Friedlander were awarded the medal of honor of the New York Architectural League.

Two weeks ago, I visited a special exhibition at the Society of Arts and Letters, where some very fine collaborative sculptures by Friendander, in conjunction with architecture, are being shown currently. They recalled to mind even more strongly his outstanding, but apparently forgotten, equestrians, "Valor" and "Sacrifice."

I am well familiar with the completed heroic-size models of these beautiful groups intended for our Capital, and I wonder, like many who have seen them, why they were never erected.

Portuguese Neutrality

In your May 13 editorial on Spain, you again took occasion to make a few remarks on Portugal which, I thought, gave the readers a wrong view of the situation in Portugal. On April 29, Dr. Follick, a member of the British Parliament, in a letter to the London Daily Telegraph said, with reference to the position of Franco vis-a-vis the United Nations, that as far as regime was concerned "Portugal was as bad as Spain" and accused Portugal of hindering the Allied war effort by alleged pro-Axis sympathy.

On the next day the same London paper published the following reply from Mr. Henry Hopkinson, former British Minister in Lisbon:

"Having been British Minister in Lisbon at a crucial period in the war—when the negotiations were taking place for air bases in the Azores, for the organization of an expedition to recover Portuguese Timor, and finally for a complete ban on the export of wolfram to Germany—I can testify that Portugal at all times agreed to do whatever was requested of her in the name of the Anglo-Portuguese alliance. Indeed, she went further by extending to the Americans similar rights in the Azores to those granted to her British ally.

"The reason she never entered the war as a combatant on the Allied side was that she was never asked to do so. On the contrary, the British government made it quite clear to the Portuguese government that it did not suit them, either from the political or the military angle, that Portugal should become engaged in war with Germany. It was, in fact, Portuguese neutrality which gave General Franco a valid reason for resisting German pressure in 1940 to enter the war on the side of the Axis.

"It is true that wolfram prices were high, but as they were paid for in the case of Britain by means of credits, whereas Germany was called upon to supply goods in exchange, they operated in practice as a serious handicap to the German economy.

"To anyone who knows Portugal well the suggestion made by Mr. Follick . . . that the present regime is in any way harsher than that of General Franco is totally incomprehensible.

"Certainly Portugal has not got the same parliamentary system as our own, but in many respects the powers wielded by the Portuguese government are less far-reaching than those exercised by our present Socialist rulers under Orders in Council, regulations and so forth.

"Finally, I would remind Mr. Follick that the conception of an Atlantic Union was first put forward by Dr. Salazar in a speech to the National Assembly on May 25, 1944."

The same point of view was expressed by Sir Walford Selby, British Ambassador in Lisbon during the years 1937-1940.

"I can confirm that at no time did we invite our ally to depart from the neutrality she had declared when the war began.

"Few without experience of the position which came about in the Iberian Peninsula in the years immediately preceding the war can have any conception of the extent of the organized attack concentrated by Hitler's Germany on our own position both in Spain and Portugal when that country was preparing the way for aggression.

"Whatever view may be held of the policy of Dr. Salazar, it is a mistake to overlook this fundamental consideration of German policy which constituted as grave a menace to Portugal as it did to us."

Matter of Fact

By Joseph Alsop

The Case of Dr. Oppenheimer

IT IS GETTING to be very unprogressive to believe that the Bill of Rights means what it says. All the same, there are still some old-fashioned Americans who obstinately cling to this unenlightened belief. And these few reactionaries may be interested—they may even be aroused—by the case of Dr. Oppenheimer.

Frank E. Oppenheimer and his wife, Jaquenette, are the incidental casualties of the most recent House Un-American Activities Committee's clamorous headline hunts. Last week the committee disclosed that the Oppenheimers had briefly belonged to the Communist Party, when they were both young and foolish, in the time before the war.

It did not matter that both Oppenheimers had learned better, and had left the party eight years ago. It did not matter that Oppenheimer was emphatically not a party member when he was one of the physicists working in the Manhattan District project. It did not matter that Oppenheimer's temporary aberration had no slightest connection with his brother, the great physicist, Dr. J. Robert Oppenheimer. What mattered was just one thing. Frank Oppenheimer's position caused the committee's revelation to make the most wonderfully satisfying headlines.

NO HEADLINES were made, of course, by what followed. Yet it deserves to be recorded also that Oppenheimer has now lost his post as a professor of physics at the University of Minnesota; that his chances of continuing a fruitful teaching career have been sharply reduced; and that all his once-bright prospects are now darkly overcast. In short, this individual, this citizen, has been sacrificed to the congressional headline hunger as cheerfully as though he were a rabbit.

To be sure, the casualty is just the sort of fellow that Congressmen like least. This dark, youngish man, with his nervous, intense manner, obviously suffers from idealism almost in the waay that so many of the Congressmen's favorite lobbyists suffer from gas on the stomach. He is intellectual, a brilliant scientist, a bit of a Bohemian, as his excessively ostentatious sideburns are plainly intended to suggest. And just to complete this lamentable picture of high-brow nonconformism, his generous impulses are left entirely uncontrolled by his total political naivete.

It would have been comic, if it had not been tragic, to hear the two Oppenheimers talking about their past and present politics, after their experience before the House committee. It was not until the mid-thirties, when Oppenheimer was already a promising physicist with good work at Johns Hopkins and the great Cavendish laboratory behind him, that he began to notice the woes of the world. In the intervals of working for his doctorate at Caltech (his thesis was called "Beta Rays of Nitrogen Thirteen"), he did the usual Marxists reading course of the period.

The beauties of the simple Marxist system charmed him. Being all-outers by nature, he and his wife, whom he had just married, applied for Communist Party memberships. While members, they did all the conventional things, from organizing rallies for the Spanish Loyalists to participating solemnly in party discussion groups. Finally they drifted out of the party because they did not like its anti-democratic atmosphere.

***

FROM THE FIRST, they were fringe members, not subjected to serious party discipline. Even today they cannot quite understand why the Communists so disappointed them. They are of those who believe that the good will triumph, that parties will be democratic, and that men will grow virtuous, because one wants them to. The same self-indulgent belief in salvation by faith has now sent them into the Wallace movement.

"Good things have just got to happen," according to Mrs. Oppenheimer, "if you believe in them hard enough."

One more detail finishes the portrait of two people who are only guilty of misdirected, perhaps rather self-righteous good intentions. A couple of years ago, when Oppenheimer was confronted, point blank and by surprise, with his former party membership, he was foolish enough to deny it. The denial of course intensified the effects of the subsequent revelation. And now he has been punished as though for a great crime against the state, which he has not committed. One realized how severely he had been punished, from his weary parting explanation:

"I guess I'll go back to Minnesota and make my grades out. I have to give a doctors' examination tomorrow. After that, I don't know, except that I like teaching, and it will be pretty hard to find a post."

SUCH IS THE CASE of Dr. Oppenheimer, who is certainly as silly about politics as he is clever about physics. His life has been needlessly, pointlessly broken in the course of a headline battle, much as peasants used to be accidently winged during the great eastern European landowners' vast mass slaughters of wild game.

But even for a Prince Esterhazy, peasant-shooting was not considered a desirable sideline of pheasant-shooting. It is time to apply a considerably stricter standard to Congressmen. A good place to begin would be to stop the vulgar yet dangerous heresy-hunt which the House Un-American Activities Committee has now launched in the universities.

Today and Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

The Investigation Business

THE NEXT BIG show is scheduled to open, it appears, when Senator Hickenlooper releases the necessary microphones, television cameras and klieg lights. It is to be an exhibition match between the Navy and the Air Force, and the advertisements say that no holds are to be barred. The show is to be conducted by the Armed Services Committee of the House. According to the advanced billing by the chairman, Mr. Vinson, as reported by the Associated Press, the investigation has "seven major objectives."

LIPPMANN

Among the seven major objectives, which the 36 Congressmen are going to shoot at, there are some stupendous objectives. They are going "to examine the performance characteristics of the B-36 bomber to determine whether it is a satisfactory weapon." They are going "to examine the roles and missions of the Air Force and the Navy to determine whether or not the decision to cancel construction of the aircraft carrier United States was sound." They are going "to study the effectiveness of strategic bombing to determine whether the Nation is sound in following this concept to its present extent."

THE COMMITTEE is not, however, going to investigate its own capacity to investigate the performance characteristics of the B-36 bomber, the roles and the missions of the Navy and the Air Force, and the effectiveness of strategic bombing. That is assumed and taken for granted. Yet that is the very question which needs some discussion before the uproar starts.

THE QUESTION is whether 36 Congressmen, after cross-examining a long list of admirals and generals, can decide by a count of their own noses the issues which this committee proposes to decide.

They are the issues which the best military and scientific minds of all countries are continually studying and debating. They are the issues on which only the ignorant speak with certainty. They are the issues on which the more qualified the man, the more thoroughly informed, the more intimate his knowledge of the hidden and essential details, the more tentative and experimental are his conclusions. They are issues involving the security of the United States, the self-confidence and morale of fighting men. They are issues which cannot be decided yes or no but only by a close calculation of alternative risks.

YET THESE issues are to be "investigated" and "determined" by a public spectacle. Is this not the culminating example of how the investigating procedure of Congress has been allowed to degenerate to a point where the vital interests of the United States and the intellectual integrity of Congress itself are in jeopardy?

When a congressional committee sets itself up to determine the performance characteristics of a bomber and the roles and missions of the various armed forces in the unknown strategical situations of a hypothetical war, then surely it must be recognized that these investigating committees rush in where men with even a little wisdom would fear to tread.

THE ONLY reason the country puts up with this way of dealing with grave questions is that the whole subject of military technology and strategy is so remote from the daily life of most of us. But the absurdity of the procedure would quickly be self-evident if Senator Hickenlooper or Representatives Vinson and Van Zandt set out to determine the performance characteristics of ammoniated tooth powder in preventing dental decay, or the roles and missions of surgery and medicine, or the effectiveness of a high protein diet.

The harm done by these intrusions into matters which cannot be determined by the votes of uninformed and untrained men is enormous. Not only is the general public misled and miseducated, but the informed and trained men, who alone can make the responsible decisions, are so harried and wearied by these investigations that they cannot do their work.

If all the leading surgeons and doctors had to spend days and weeks expounding the performance characteristics of their instruments and their medicines to congressional committees, and debating their roles and missions, the investigation business and racket would flourish while a lot of their patients died.

BUT THAT IS what is happening to the public business in Washington. If someone took the trouble to count the hours of time which the Secretary of State and his chief advisers have spent preparing for committee hearings, waiting to appear before committees, appearing before committees, and cleaning up the messes caused at home and abroad by half-truths and misunderstandings, he would have at least a part of the explanation of why our contribution in the Paris Conference has been so singularly uninteresting and unimportant.

If he will add to it the time and energy demanded of the whole higher administration of the Pentagon, of Mr. Paul Hoffman and his staff, he will begin to appreciate what these shows cost measured in time lost and energy wasted that should be devoted to profound thought and to difficult decisions.

U. S. Offered Plan for South

greater diversification in crops."

These trends in both industry and agriculture already exist, the authors assert. Because of them the per capita income in the South has increased faster than for the country as a whole in the past 15 years. Even so, it is below the rest of the country.

Federal policies have aided these trends greatly, the report says, and "can continue to be of the greatest possible service . . . in accelerating the rate of change.

"The Federal Government cannot carry out operations which will produce greater income in industry and agriculture," they declared. "This must be done by private individuals and corporations."

Old Theories Discounted

The authors point out that if full employment for the Nation as a whole is not maintained, it will be "virtually impossible to carry out an effective program for the economic progress of the South."

However, in making specific suggestions for future Federal policy, the authors take into account the effects of such policies during periods of depression as well as in times of full employment.

Among the many old-time arguments advanced to explain the South's economic lag and discounted by the report, are:

1. The protective tariff "imposed by the North on the South."
2. Higher freight rates in the South.
3. Absentee ownership of Southern industry.
4. Wage differentials between the South and the rest of the country.
5. "That hoary old standby," the lingering effects of the Civil War.

These oft-repeated arguments, the report says; "are actually either of minor importance or are not truly causal."

Plan Has Four Points

The authors point out that Southern agriculture cannot be prosperous until the uneconomical small-sized farm gives way to a larger operation—the medium-sized farm. This means that the per capita income of farmers cannot be increased until fewer persons are engaged in it.

But to accomplish that transition, they aver, employment opportunities for farmers who would be displaced would have to be provided.

The farm program proposed is in four points.

1. Extension of such Federal activities as research in agricultural colleges and experiment stations, erosion control and soil conservation, and the Federal-State extension system.
2. Extension of loans for soil improvement, etc., by local banks at reasonable rates.
3. Continuation of the loan policy of Farmers Home Administration for improving productive efficiency.
4. Their proposal for income supports.

This proposal has many of the elements of the program put forward by Secretary of Agriculture Brannan on April 7. It provides a similar system of compensatory payments—payments to farmers of the difference between a support level and the price farmers get for their products in the market.

"Forward Pricing" Proposed

Under this program the Government would guarantee farmers 85 per cent of a "normal market price." The normal market price would be one which, under conditions of high demand and reasonably full employment, would induce the production of neither a surplus nor a deficit.

If the price of a product fell below 85 per cent of this normal market price farmers would be paid the difference from the Treasury.

The program would involve dependence on "forward pricing" by the Government, so that farmers would have a guarantee against price fluctuations. This forward pricing would be based on an estimated normal price together with compensatory payments to maintain farm income.

If crop restrictions are imposed, the authors suggest that specific soil conservation and improvement practices be required as a condition for receiving benefits.

Two Plans Are Compared

The report gave detailed attention to the way the proposal would work for cotton and tobacco, the South's two major cash crops. It compares the proposal to the Brannan Plan for these two crops.

The authors' program, they say, would be less costly to consumers of cotton and tobacco as well as to taxpayers. However, they admit the Brannan Plan will have more appeal to cotton and tobacco farmers themselves.

The Brannan Plan and the authors' proposal for nonstorable products are similar. The chief difference is that in the Brannan Plan production payments would not be lowered as a means for discouraging expansion of production. Instead, quotas and acreage controls would be used.

They believe their plan would require less administrative expense and production control than the Brannan Plan.

Other features of the report are:

1. Industrial development. Two direct ways to stimulate the South's industrialization, it says, would be for the Government to locate defense industries in the South and to provide funds for regional research centers and graduate technical schools, etc.

Outside Funds Called Important

2. Financial resources and capital investment: The authors admit that no accurate estimates of the amount needed to overcome the economic lag of the South are available, but they hazard that "the amount is not likely to be less than three billion dollars."

The main source for capital funds must be investments by large national companies from outside the region. Another would be borrowing by Southern companies.

But, they add, "the great mass of small and medium-sized Southern companies will have to depend upon local financing. They suggest an intensive survey to determine the legitimate need for business capital and the resources available to meet that need.

Here they suggest the Government extend bank deposit insurance to cover 100 per cent of all deposits. They suggest also that the United States instruct the Treasury to watch the regional flow of funds in any period of financial tension and to move Treasury deposits to counteract any pronounced tendency for funds to leave any one region.

3. Labor and wages. The authors do not believe that the higher wages Southern industrial labor now is getting have slowed up industrial expansion.

4. Natural resources: Their recommendations state: "Forest conservation and devolpment should be expanded . . . Soil conservation should be expanded . . . Undeveloped water power should be harnessed . . . There is urgent need for more analysis by mining engineers, chemists and economists to appraise the possibilities of the minerals in the South."

Other Advice Sought

The report was delivered to the Economic Advisers last Friday. E. J. Coil, NPA director, said the authors have consulted regularly all members of the NPA Committee of the South for criticism and suggestions during the year they have been employed on the study.

"CEA thus is receiving not only the authors' expert analyses," Coil says, "but a report that takes into account the experience and judgment of a cross section of Southern leaders."

Sears' Prices Cut 6½ Pct. In Catalogue

Chicago, June 19 (AP).—Sears, Roebuck and Co. today began placing in the mails its largest general catalogues since the fall of 1941. It is for the fall and winter of 1949.

Containing 1380 pages, the catalogue lists nearly 100,000 separate items. Sears said a sampling of 2000 representative items showed prices lower on 62 per cent, unchanged on 35 per cent and higher on 3 per cent compared with the spring and summer general catalogue.

Some of the largest reductions were: automobile batteries, down 31 per cent; armored cable, also down 31 per cent; flannel yard goods, down 19 per cent; sheets and sheeting, down 15 per cent, and lingerie, down 12 per cent.

T. V. Houser, the company's merchandising manager, said prices averaged 6½ per cent lower than the spring and summer general catalogue and 8 per cent lower than last year's fall and winter general catalogue.

For the first time, Sear's offered a television receiver. It is a portable model with a 7-inch tube, at $149.95, including indoor antenna. The catalogue told potential buyers, "We may refuse your order if, in our opinion, your location is unsatisfactory for television reception."

Garrison, N. Y., June 19 (U.P.).—Former Representative Hamilton Fish, Republican, announced today he would seek the Senate seat of Robert Wagner, sr. (D., N. Y.) who has been ill and is expected to retire.

"I am actively campaigning to secure the Republican nomination for senator from New York," Fish told a Knights of Columbus communion breakfast here.

Fish, who served in Congress from 1919 to 1945, predicted that within 10 years "there will be either a coalition in the United States between the Republicans and Democrats against the Communists or the formation of two parties—one professing faith in God and the other supporting the Communists."

'Hearts' Killing of 2 Charged to Man, 32

Lakeport, Calif., June 19 (U.P.).—Daniel Brusnaham was charged today with double murder and arson as authorities prepared to check names of 31 women they said he had corresponded with through a "lonely hearts" club.

Brusnaham, 32, was charged with the murder of his bride of three months and her daughter by a previous marriage, Agnes, 2. Both died Tuesday in a fire at Brusnaham's cabin. It was taken for granted at first that the fire was accidental.

District Attorney Lovett Fraser said Virginia, 31, the victim, had met Brusnaham through a "lonely hearts" club.

Fraser said authorities were checking on a diary kept by Brusnaham, covering a period of several years and giving detailed information on 31 women with whom he had corresponded though the club. Some of the photographs and data carried notations such as "possible" and "maybe," he said.

Slot Machine Canvass Hits County Peak

Special to The Washington Post.

La Plata, Md., June 19.—Campaigns for and against legalizing slot machines in Charles County, which voters will decide in a referendum Tuesday, were nearing an end today, with vigorous activity on both sides.

In churches and in house-to-house interviews, opponents pleaded with voters to kill the measure, while the newly organized Restaurant Association and other proponents urged passage.

Appeal to Negroes

Two officers of the Charles County Ministerial Association made definite appeals yesterday to Negro voters to line up against the slot machines.

The Rev. Harold A. Milstead, Waldorf, spoke at a meeting in Zion Baptist Church at Hill Top. The Rev. C. R. Pierce, Marbury, vice president, addressed a meeting of the Charles County branch, National Association for Advancement of Colored People, at Shiloh. Luther Stuckey, Pisgah, president of the chapter, urged the group to cooperate with the ministerial association.

The association has slated its windup meeting of the campaign for 8:30 p. m. Monday at La Plata High School. The meeting is listed as an open forum and debate, but spokesmen for the Charles County Restaurant Association, chief proponents of the licensing measure, indicated they will not be present.

7049 Eligible to Vote

Polls will be open from 7 a. m. to 7 p.m., for the 7049 eligible voters. Some observers predicted a heavy vote because 287 persons registered last Tuesday.

Ballots will be cast in 11 precincts of 10 election districts. They are: First District, LaPlata; Second, Hill Top; Third, Cross Roads; Fourth, Allen's Fresh; Fifth, Tompkinsville; Sixth, White Plains; Seventh, (First Precinct) Pomonkey and (Second Precinct) Indian Head; Eighth, Bryantown; Ninth, Hughesville; Tenth, Marbury.

Of the 287 newly registered voters, 122 listed themselves as Republicans, 161 as Democrats, and six as Independents. Although party lineups have not played an important part in the campaign, it is pointed out that the bill calling for the referendum election was sponsored in the Maryland Assembly by Senator James B. Monroe, Republican, of Waldorf.

Sabu Is an Actor In Film at Dupont!

Michael Powell and Emeric Pressburger, the Archers, have scored a near-hit with their newest production, "The End of the River." You might like to see it before it leaves the Dupont.

Sabu is the star of the picture. To many moviegoers that means tabu as far as they are concerned. They've seen him, time and again, playing the dark-skinned jungle boy who grunts his way through eight reels like a dehydrated Tarzan. Not this time.

Powell and Pressburger have too fine a regard for the human species than to reduce him to the sub-strata of the beast. They leave that sort of thing to Hollywood and try to fashion individuals who have rational emotions and the ability to express them. So, for a change, Sabu is given a chance to do more than look as if an elephant had just stepped on one of his toes. And he doesn't do badly.

True, he's no Sir Laurence, but in the part of Manoel, an ingenuous Arekuna Indian boy from the headwater country of the Amazon who is exposed to the white man's civilization, he does exceedingly well. Told via flashbacks, "River" is the tale of Manoel, an outcast from the jungle because he is unable to average the murder of his family. He is befriended by a gold prospector who turns him over to Porpino, an unscrupulous trader. Porpino, vengeful because the boy will not reveal the location of the gold field, attempts to kill the boy by sending him to a fever-ridden balata plantation up the river. There he meets Teresa, an Indian girl.

Evacuating the camp, he works on a river steamer and marries Teresa. In Belem, he unwittingly turns on his real friends and is exploited by a fascist organization parading as a labor union.

When it is suppressed, he can't find work. In the end, as a result of oppression and mistreatment from a society he cannot understand, he commits an accidental murder. His trial forms the frame into which the picture is fit.

treatment of the theme of a maladjusted individual trying to survive in an alien society. Set authentically in Brazil, it has a fresh, open-air quality about it, particularly the opening scenes of life among the Arekuna Indians.

Another positive value is the presence of Bibi Ferreira, Brazilian star, as the feminine lead. She's no Betty Grable, but she has an effervescent warmth which comes across strongly, especially when she sings. We think you'll like her. The supporting cast, too.

As in most English imports (excluding "Corridor of Mirrors"), minor characters have character, they are not tintypes. Among those who do much with little are Esmond Knight as Dantes, the beri-beri-ridden plantation manager; James Hayter and Torin Thatcher as Chico and Lisboa, friends to Manoel, and Raymond Lovell as Propine.

Derek Twist has directed the piece and he has done a competent work of craftsmanship. He has put the photography of Christopher Challis to fine use to evoke appropriate moods. His integration of the musical score of Lambert Williamson, played by the London Philharmonic, is a superb blending to the emotional line of the film.

Considering the quality of most of the movies in town this week, you can very easily do worse than this new feature at the Dupont. To help you decide, there's a magnificently hilarious cartoon, "Slap-Happy Lion"—a wonderful complementary piece to the main one. It, alone, is worth the price of admission. John M. Coppinger.

'Corridor of Mirrors' a Confusing Mystery

Rudolph Cartier, the producer of "Corridor of Mirrors," must have decided he was going to make the best mystery of the year. He has succeeded: This new Appolo film is the most confusing concoction we've come across in months.

The Hippodrome's British importation is handicapped by being technically deficient. The director, Terence Young, seems to have avoided every shred of intelligibility to achieve an effect of mystery. So, "Corridor" turns out to be a weird melange of horror, schizophrenia, murder, and romance.

Things don't get off to a very good start because of an inaudible sound track. As if the story wasn't involved enough, you can't hear what the actors are saying for the first fifteen minutes. When you do, you don't care.

Certainly the story is unusual. Eric Portman, as Paul Mangin, is an art connoisseur. He becomes obsessed with a girl he sees in a 400-year-old painting. Although he lives in the twentieth century, he prefers the Renaissance of the Borgias. He feels he is reincarnated in our modern epoch; that he was jilted by Venezia, the girl in the portrait; that he will find her one day. He does. She's Edena Romney, as Mifanwy (very exotic name, what?), a playgirl of London society.

Mifanwy finds Mangin attractive and spends weeks at his Renaissance-styled mansion, in the heart of London, parading up and down his corridor of mirrors, each day wearing a different, magnificently-revealing gown. He's obviously in love with her. And this is where the story is different and the audience is cheated. Low-key lighting, angle photography, suspenseful music, vaguely equivocal dialogue—all lead you to think he's a Bluebeard. Rather, he's a very sincere character with the right intentions. When she hears she's not the first one, Mifanwy walks out on Mangin.

Anyway, there's a murder which is completely uncalled for, a trial and an execution for Mangin. He becomes an effigy in Tussaud's Wax Museum where his old flames come to mourn him. In the museum, at the end of the picture, there's a scene of macabre horror which makes you realize what glaring inconsistencies have been exhibited for the past 90 minutes.

Eric Portman goes through the whole thing with a glint in his eye which makes you think he's six cents short of a nickel. He rivals George Raft as Dead-Pan of the Month. Edena Romney, definitely lovely, is introduced in this film. She's very photogenic but her mascara looks as if it had been put on with a trowel. In graciousness we will not mention the supporting cast nor the people responsible for the technical end of this production which proves that though England isn't in tropical climes, it can, on occasion, export a lemon. JOHN M. COPPINGER.

The Lyons Den

By Leonard Lyons

NEW YORK.—Justice William O. Douglas promised Don McNeil that some day he would attend one of McNeil's breakfast broadcasts, anonymously. And pursuant to this promise Douglas went to the studio and sat in the audience . . . During the broadcast McNeil said: "I need a gentleman from the audience. Would you, sir, step up?" He pointed to Douglas. The Associate Justice of the U. S. Supreme Court stepped up, and a lady contestant was asked: "Do you know this man?" She said she didn't . . . "What business would you say he's in, from looking at him" . . . The lady appraised Douglas, and said: "A truck-driver."

When Danny Kaye was the guest of honor at the Lord Mayor's luncheon in London, Ambassador Lew Douglas attended this unusual event. The Lord Mayor told Douglas that never had there been such an event as this. "That's true," was the diplomat's reply. "I never saw a reception like this—except perhaps 25 years ago, when we in New York gave a reception for Sir Harry Lauder."

Mildred McAfee Horton, the former head of the WAVES who just retired from Wellesley, presented the diplomas to the graduates as her final act as president of the college. One of the graduates was a young lady who married during her junior year, and who recently became a mother . . . Mrs. Horton, in presenting the diploma, also gave her a pair of blue booties.

This is Beardsley Ruml's version: He went to a doctor for a check-up, for it was apparent that he was exhausted by overwork. His doctor cautioned him to ease up by eliminating some of his outside activities . . . "But that's where I have my fun," Ruml told him. "If I'm to cut down, I'll cut down in my regular work." And so Ruml resigned as chairman of the board of R. H. Macy & Co.

Lawrence Tibbett, who was to sing at the WFDR inaugural ceremonies at Carnegie Hall Thursday night, became ill, and Igor Gorin was invited to go on in his stead. Gorin agreed, but Mrs. Gorin was distressed because, at long last, she had succeeded in obtaining tickets for "South Pacific" for Thursday night . . . David Dubinsky, head of the ILGWU—the union which owns WFDR—told of this problem, and had to test his influence in New York. The test was met, for he was able to get two other tickets to "South Pacific" for the Gorins, thereby freeing Gorin to appear at the ceremonies.

British Report Boom in Output Of Island Films

London, June 19 (AP).—The British motion picture industry is showing signs of "vigorous revival" after a serious slump, Harold Wilson, president of the Board of Trade, said today.

Three months ago, he said, only 10 first feature films were in production, whereas British studios are working on 15 now. Seventeen new productions are scheduled to start within a month or two, he reported. Numbers of employes in studios have increased more than 500 since the end of March.

The improved position, Wilson said, is due to direct and indirect participation by the goverment's Film Finance Corp. in financing production, and by a cut in production costs.

Shriners Expect 1500 On Cruise Tonight

Approximately 1500 are expected on the annual Potomac cruise sponsored by the Shriners of Almas Temple tonight at 8:30 o'clock aboard the SS Mount Vernon.

Music for the event will be presented by the Almas Temple band. Arthur J. Thomas is chairman of the committee. Illustrious Potentate Renah F. Camalier will head the procession boarding the vessel.

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

FOR EDDIE JOOST, a guy who was released by the Cincinnati Reds a few years back because he couldn't hit, the public balloting on the personnel of the major league All-Star teams is a remarkable sort of triumph.

POVICH

Joost's name tops the voting for the American League shortstop role. The Reds always acknowledged that he was a superb fielder, but this year, strangely enough, he is making the All-Star team on his hitting. Only one regular in the league, George Kell of the Tigers, can show a loftier batting average than Joost's .320.

The frail-looking, bespectacled Joost who was supposedly washed up as a big leaguer three years ago when he slid back to the minors because he couldn't hit, not only has been hitting, but with amazing power. So many home runs have been bouncing off his bat that he is now tied for the lead in that department with 16.

The league's pitchers are learning to respect those guys who wear glasses, incidentally. Three of the first six hitters in the league, Joost, Dominic DiMaggio of the Red Sox and Bob Dillinger of the Browns, are drawing a bead on pitching from behind lenses.

THE UPSET of next month's All-Star game at Brooklyn will be the presence of Lou Boudreau merely in a managerial role. He qualified for that job by leading the Indians to the pennant last year. But this is a season when he couldn't make it as a ball player despite the fact that a year ago he was far in front of the league's shortstops. A .357 hitter last season, Boudreau shows only a .242 batting average.

The Red Sox will provide two of the American League's three starting outfielders. Dom DiMaggio with his .320 average is a sure bet, and Ted Williams, whose .318 is something of a slump for him, can't be kept out of the starting lineup either. Only DiMaggio is outhitting him. The No. 3 man in Boudreau's American League outfield is almost certain to be Tommy Henrich.

A half dozen outfielders are outhitting Henrich's .291, but with Boudreau and the balloting fans that won't make much difference. Henrich belongs on any all-star team with his penchant for breaking up ball games and his superlative play in the outfield.

THE SECOND-DIVISION Red Sox will probably be the club more heavily represented in the American League lineup. Their catcher, Birdie Tebbetts, is far and away the most proficient backstop in the league despite the fact that Yogi Berra is leading him in the balloting. And in Mel Parnell they own the leading left-handed pitcher.

Detroit will get into the act with its new strikeout king, Virgil Trucks, who has won ten and lost three, and is crowding Vic Raschi of the Yankees as The Pitcher of the Year. But the Tigers also will be providing the league-leading hitter this season in Third Baseman George Kell, who is batting a lofty .347, and playing the position better than anybody else, in addition.

Joe Gordon, at second base, could be the lone representative of last year's pennant winners in the 1949 All-Star game. But Cass Michaels, the long-underrated guy of the White Sox, is outhitting Gordon and polling more votes. Gordon will get into the game, but Michaels will be honored with the starting role, and he deserves it.

EDDIE ROBINSON of the Nats will make it nicely at first base for the simple reason that he is the only first baseman of distinction in the league this season. He has been hitting over .300 most of the season, and no other established first sacker has been close to that figure. The Yankees have a pair of .300 hitters in Kryhoski and Phillips, but they are come-latelies who are not polling many votes because they have been sharing the first-base job.

A year ago Bob Feller was getting a bad press for ducking the All-Star game after being selected as one of the American League pitchers. There will be no such embarrassment for Feller this year, because no invitation to pitch will be extended him. His record of three wins against six losses precludes that.

The public will pick all players except the pitchers, and the managers are bound to start the men who get the most votes at their respective positions. July 12 will be the day when the grandstand managers at last will have a say in what's happening.

Middlecoff, Mangrum Tie After Tense 11-Hole Playoff

Detroit, June 19 (AP).—National Open champion Cary Middlecoff and Lloyd Mangrum, who rank among the nation's top money winning pros of 1949, divided honors in the Motor City Open golf tournament today as they played to a tie in an eleven-hole "sudden death" playoff.

Each went into the final round today with a 54 hole total of 204 and they came up with a 69 apiece—two under par in their regulation rounds.

After a brief rest, they set out on their "sudden death" playoff and at the end of the first nine each had an even par 35. Playing steady and conservative golf each had a birdie and eight pars on the outgoing nine.

After consulting with tournament sponsors and PGA officials, Middlecoff and Mangrum decided to play two more holes in the hopes of breaking the deadlock but they parred each hole.

Middlecoff ran into trouble on the final hole of the "sudden death" play as his drive curled to the right of the green on the 210-yard hole, leaving him in the rough with about a 40-foot shot to the pin. He came out of the trouble with a beautiful shot which left him less than a foot away from the hole and he holed out for his par.

Mangrum's drive on that hole had left him about 10 feet to the left of the pin. He putted for a birdie that would have given him the tournament but the ball stopped 3 inches short of the hole

Each got $2250 today as they divided the $2600 first prize and the $1900 second money.

Vernon Hits Homer in 11th, Feller Beats Yanks

New York, June 19 (AP).—Mickey Vernon blasted a two-run homer in the eleventh inning today to give the Cleveland Indians a 4-2 triumph over the New York Yankees. Bobby Feller pitched brilliantly all the way, restricting the Yanks to one hit after Tom Henrich homered in the fourth inning.

Allie Reynolds, who started for the Yankees was taken out in the seventh and Joe Page finished up to suffer the loss. A crowd of 49,031 saw the Indians take the odd game of the series.

The Yankees scored first on singles by Tommy Henrich and Yogi Berra with a scoring fly by Bobby Brown.

Henrich's 13th homer put the Yankees a run ahead in the fourth and that was the local's last tally.

A pair of passes to Vernon and Ken Keltner and Larry Doby's single gave the Tribe its first run, while Dick Kryhoski's bad throw on Dale Mitchell, a single by Vernon and Doby's fly tied it up at 2-2 in the seventh.

Page pitched in and out of trouble in the last four innings but walked Jim Hegan in the eleventh to get in the hole. Vernon then belted his homer to end the game.

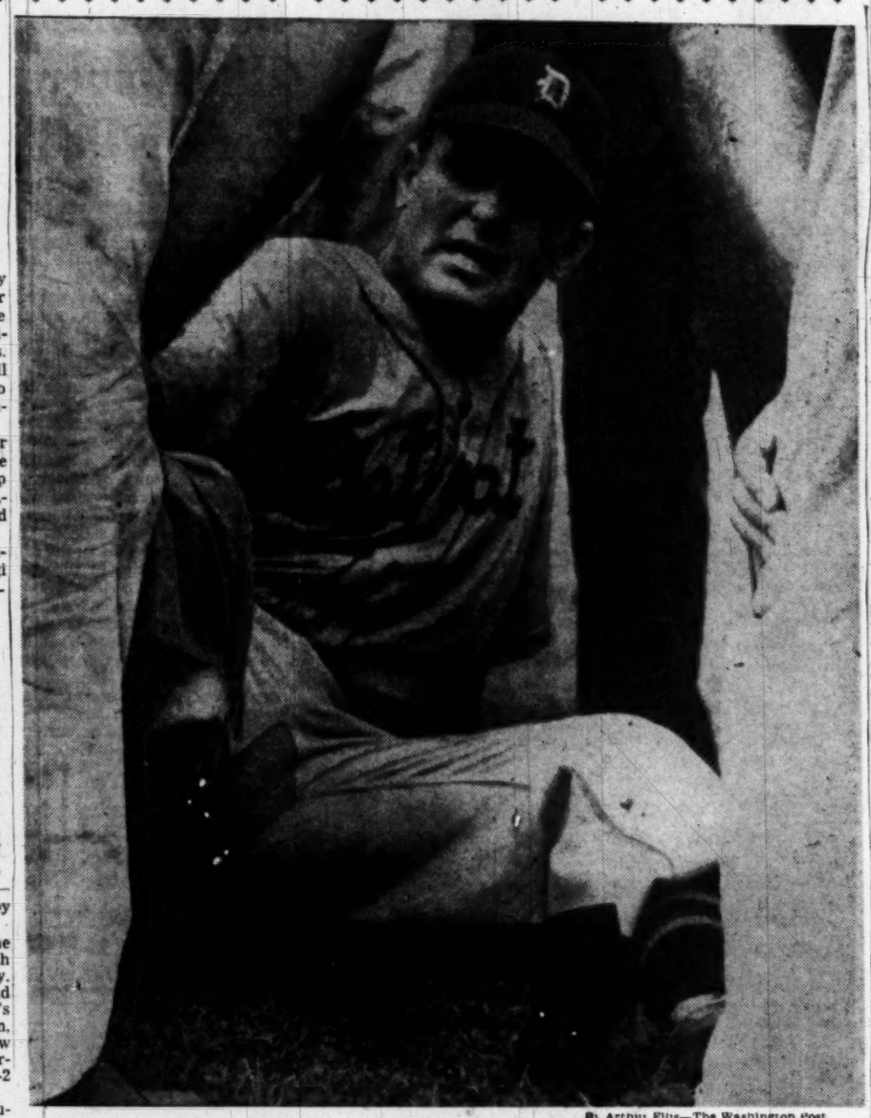
Waitkus Reported In 'Good Condition'

Chicago, June 19 (U.P.).—First Baseman Eddie Waitkus of the Philadelphia Phillies, shot and seriously wounded by a lovesick girl, was reported in "very good condition" today.

Doctors said they plan to take further X-rays of Waitkus' lung and chest tomorrow to determine when the .22-caliber rifle bullet lodged in the rear wall of the chest can be removed safely.



By Arthur Ellis—The Washington Post

DOWN — BUT BRIEFLY — Virgil "Fire" Trucks, the Detroit Tigers' ace pitcher, grimaces with pain after turning his ankle in the seventh inning of yesterday's first game with the Nats. Trucks took the throw from George Vico to retire Eddie Robinson at first, then sat down unceremoniously. He was up shortly, however, to complete a four-hit mound job that beat the Nats, 9-0. The Tigers went on to win the second game, too, 7-0.

Bosox Homers Top Chisox, 9-2

Boston, June 19 (AP).—Ted Williams and Dom Dimaggio each hit three-run homers today, guiding Lefthander Chuck Stobbs to his first major league victory and the Boston Red Sox to a 9-2 triumph over the Chicago White Sox. A paid audience of 20,358 witnessed Boston's fourth consecutive victory over the visitors.

Chicago Outfielder Herb Adams was removed to Sancta Maria Hospital, Cambridge, after striking his head on the bull pen fence while trying to catch Williams' homer.

He suffered a slight concussion and a shoulder injury. The 21-year-old rookie was ordered held in a hospital in nearby Cambridge until the end of the week. X-ray examination showed there was no skull fracture.

His shoulder was being treated and preliminary examination indicated no break, the hospital spokesman added.

Williams' wallop, his 16th of the season, just slipped into the home club's bull pen in right center. Adams, who had replaced Dave Philley in the last of the fourth, chased the ball, running towards center from right field.

As he waved his arms, apparently indicating he could catch it, he crashed the fence which is approximately five and a half feet high.

Adams, who was carried from the field on a litter took over for Philley after the latter pulled a leg muscle. Fred Hancock, an infielder, finished the game in right for the White Sox.

The doubles title went to Bill Oley and Tommy Abellera, who scored over Hal Green and Bob Gordon, 21—14, 21—15, 21—16. In the women's singles the champion was Jane Stauffer, who turned back May Medoff, 21—19, 21—16, 21—17.

Dodgers Lose; Cards Win

Pafko Slams Two Homers as Cubs Defeat League Leaders by 8-2

Chicago, June 19 (AP).—The Chicago Cubs finally snapped their losing streak at seven straight here today by whipping the Brooklyn Dodgers, 8 to 2, before an overflow crowd of 42,089.

Johnny Schmitz exerted his usual joinx over the Dodgers by effectively scattering eight hits. Andy Pafko belted two homers to give him eight for the season.

It was Schmitz' third victory, two of them being the only Cub wins over Brooklyn in 10 starts this year.

Pafko paced a 10-hit attack by the Cubs on Jack Banta—who was routed in three innings—Erv Palica, and Paul Minner. Andy's homers gave him a total of six against Brooklyn.

Four hits, including a double by Hank Sauer, and a walk, gave the Cubs three in the first and Pafko's first homer with one on came in the third. They coasted in from there.

Diering's Hit Beats Phils, 6-5; Redbirds 1 Game Behind Bums

St. Louis, June 19 (AP).—Chuck Diering singled to right in the ninth inning, scoring Lou Klein from second with the winning run as the St. Louis Cardinals defeated the Philadelphia Phillies, 6 to 5, today.

Diering earlier slammed out a homer and Stan Musial hit two circuit blows for the Redbirds.

The victory, before 20,130 fans, put the Cardinals just one game behind the league-leading Brooklyn Dodgers in the tight National League race. The Dodgers lost to the Chicago Cubs, 8 to 2.

Twice Musial's homers put the St. Louis club out in front and on both times the Phillies tagged Al Brazle with the necessary runs to tie the game. Diering's home run came in the fifth inning with a man on base to match two runs Philadelphia put across in the second inning.

In the last of the ninth Klein opened with a walk against relief hurler Robin Roberts who received his fourth loss of the season from the decision. Del Rice batted, took two strikes and a ball, then gave way to Pinchhitter Ron Northey. Northey took the third strike.

Ted Wilks, who had replaced Brazle in the top of the ninth, sacrificed Klein to second. Then Diering hit the ball bringing Klein home.

The Phillies' star outfielder, Richie Ashburn, suffered a slightly sprained right ankle when he slid into second base in the eighth inning. Jack Mayo finished the game for him. There was no announcement whether Ashburn would miss any more action.

A's Win, 8-2, Then Lose, 7-3

Philadelphia, June 19 (AP).—The Philadelphia Athletics split a pair of games with the St. Louis Browns today, winning the opener, 8-2, behind rookie Alex Kellner's six-hit pitching and dropping the nightcap, 7-3, to lefthander Joe Ostrowski.

Homers robbed each pitcher of shutouts. Sherm Lollar, the Brown's catcher, hit a two-run circuit clout in the first game while Eddie Joost, whacked his sixteenth four-bagger with two on in the afterpiece.

The Browns' victory snapped two streaks, their four-game losing skein and a four-game victory string for the Athletics.

A crowd of 14,554 watched Kellner notch his ninth victory of the season in the first game. The A's rookie southpaw drove in three runs himself and never was in trouble after Lollar's homer, his third of the season.

The A's picked up their runs two at a time in four different innings.

In the second game Joost's homer followed circuit swats by Dick Kokos and Les Moss to tie the score at 3-3 in the fifth. The Browns rallied to drive Carl

Martenia's One-Hitter Wins for Ballston

Al Martenia hurled a one-hitter and struck out 17 to pace the Ballston Indians' 15-and-under baseball team to a 6-2 win over Waynoke, Va., yesterday at Waynoke.

Martenia had a no-hitter with one man out in the ninth inning, when a double by Bud White spoiled his bid. In another Ballston Indians game, the 19-and-under team romped over Bowie, 15-8, at Bowie.

Griffs Drop to Sixth; Detroit Now Only 3 Games Behind Yanks

By Morris Siegel
Post Reporter

The Nats made something out of nothing yesterday.

Shut out in both ends of a doubleheader with the Detroit Tigers they made their way into sixth place. This negative move met with the unanimous disapproval of 21,818 Griffith Stadium critics.

After Trucks had flung the Nats into sixth place, Freddie Hutchinson gave 'em a firmer grip on their new home with a 7-0 lacing in the nightcap. Compared to their four-hit treatment of Trucks, the Nats murdered Hutchinson.

Detroit's two victories, fashioned at the expense of Paul Calvert and Mickey Harris, leaves the second-place Tigers only three games in arrears of the league-leading Yankees, who were throttled by Bob Feller yesterday.

The Nats were out of both games practically before they were in them. The Tigers ganged up on Calvert for two runs in the second inning of the opener and with Trucks pitching the way he did those two proved more than enough.

In the nightcap, the Bengals whipped up a run off Harris, making his first start as a Nat, in the first inning and that turned out to be sufficient for that game. It just wasn't the Nats' day.

While Trucks and Hutchinson were disposing of the Nats with the least amount of trouble, Manager Red Rolfe's crew socked out 11 hits in the first game and came back with the same number in the nightcap.

Big Trucks was sensational. He walked Sherry Robertson to open the game, but he was to be the last Nat to reach first base until Calvert singled off Truck's foot in the sixth inning.

After Trucks had turned his ankle on a play at first base in the seventh inning, the Nats broke through his delivery for a two-hit no-run offense in the eighth and tacked on their final single in the ninth. This made no impression whatsoever on Trucks, however, as he was enjoying a comfortable 9-0 lead at the time.

Hittle Replaces Calvert

The Tigers carried that slim advantage into the seventh inning, but they came out of it with four more runs.

They did their damage on singles by Robinson and Johnny Lipon, an error b Sherry Robertson and two Calvert walks. When Calvert walked Don Kolloway, to fill the bases, he was excused in favor of rookie Lloyd Hittle. Hittle walked in the third run and an outfield fly by Vic Wertz chased in the fourth tally.

Rookie Dick Weik was responsible for the three-run Detroit ninth, walking four and pitching singles to George Kell and Wertz before Dick Welteroth was called on to bail him out.

Calvert's single in the sixth hit Trucks' left leg and bounced between short and third. In the eighth, Al Kozar lined out a single to center and went to second as pinch-hitter Buddy Lewis beat out a bunt with one away.

Evers Stretches Hit Streak

Trucks would have no truck with that kind of phenagling, however, and got rid of Gil Coan and Robertson on easy flies to dissipate that little threat.

Starter Harris did not start in great fashion and left the Nats with a 5-0 deficit when he left for a pinch-hitter in the fourth.

Doubles by Kolloway and Kell, who assaulted the former Red Soxer for three hits, made it 1-0 in the first inning. In the third inning, the Tigers ganged up on Harris with a five-hit barrage. Hoot Evers, hitting safely in his fifteenth consecutive game, knocked in two runs with a single. Groth delivered the third with a double and Kell brought the fourth tally over with his second hit, a single.

Singles by Kell, Wertz and Evers and Lipon's fly added up to the sixth and seventh Detroit runs in the seventh and a miserable day for the Nats.

The Nats made pretenses of doing something with the softballing Hutchinson in the very first inning when they loaded the bases with two away, but nothing came of this, as Kozar grounded out.

After the big Tiger third, the Nats once more struck up an abortive rally, jamming the bases with two away again on two singles and a walk. This one died as Ed Stewart popped up and so expired the Nats' last opportunity to see home plate.

Trucks' Rivals Scoreless In 24 Innings

When he blanked the Nats on four hits yesterday for his tenth victory, it made 24 1/3 innings that he hasn't allowed the opposition to give the fans a run for their money.

To further establish himself as the prime reason for the second-place showing of the surprising Tigers, the 30-year-old righthander added five more strikeouts to his record, which at 81 is the best in the league of the Lemons, Fellers and Newhousers.

From the time he struck out 418 batters for the Andalusia, Ala., team 11

Braves Win Two From Reds, 5-2, 3-2; Pirates Whip Giants

Victories Put Boston Back In 3d

Cincinnati, June 19 (AP).—The Boston Braves moved back into third place in the tight National League race today with a double-header victory over the Cincinnati Reds, 5-2 and 3-2.

A crowd of 29,401 saw the Braves come up with three runs in the sixth inning to win the opener, before Johnny Antonelli spaced eight Redleg hits to cop the nightcap.

Bob Elliott's big bat and a couple of Cincinnati errors helped Lefty Warren Spahn to his eighth victory as against five defeats in the first game. Elliott got a homer and two singles.

Herm Wehmeier, the third of Cincinnati's four hurlers, and the loser, wild-pitched Stanky home in the fourth inning with what proved to be the winning run.

Buc Rookie Hits Homer For His Dad

Pittsburgh, June 19 (AP).—The Pittsburgh Pirates took advantage of two errors, two walks and two hits to score four runs in the seventh inning and whip the New York Giants, 9 to 4, today.

Bob Chesnes scattered seven hits in winning his fourth contest against two losses.

Dino Restellin, the Pirates' slugging rookie outfielder, made good on a promise to hit a Father's Day home run for Papa Paul Restelli in San Francisco. His three-run home in the first inning gave the Buccos an early lead and delighted the crowd of 25,413.

Bobby Thomson countered with a home run for the Giants in the second. No one was aboard. The Giants got another tally in the fifth and added two more in the sixth on doubles by Sid Gordon and Thomson and Jack Lohrke's single.

The Pirates tied things up in their half of the sixth when Ralph Kiner, back in the lineup after brief hospitalization for a cold, doubled and came home on Eddie Steven's single.

Then came the wild seventh.

Mr. Taylor Wins Jumper Title in Show

By Harry De Mawby, Jr.

Roger Grove's Mr. Taylor ploughed through the knee-deep going yesterday to garner a hard-earned jumper championship over a good field of open horses at the popular Hyattsville Lions Club horse show held at Edmonson Road Park, Riverdale, Md.

A large field of entries and an unexpected number of spectators braved the inclement weather and muddy terrain to watch Mr. Taylor, ridden by Norman Taylor, take the first awards in the warm-up and knockdown-and-out events and a fourth in the touch-and-out for his winning score of 11 points.

W. C. Viar's Hi Jack, jumper champion at Saturday's Forestville show, went well enough yesterday to tie Robert C. Lee's good mare, Bonne Fille with a 7-point tally for each. Respecting their mounts and deciding against an inevitable jump-off, both riders decided to settle the reserve honors with a coin toss, and the ribbon was awarded to Hi Jack.

Helen Eichelberger's Jolly Scot, a new member of her Baltimore stable, romped to a close decision in winning the hunter tri-color by virtue of a blue in the ladies class, a second in the open hunters, and a second in the pair event.

Dropping Odds Hint Walcott May Be Even-Money for Bout

Chicago, June 19 (U.P.).—Shortening odds indicated today that Jersey Joe Walcott may enter the ring at even money Wednesday night in his bout with Ezzard Charles for recognition as world heavyweight champions.

A cut on Charles' left cheek has interfered with his training, and the betting price in his favor has been hammered down to 6 to 5. Charles, 28, will wind up training tomorrow for his fight with the 35-year-old Walcott, who is getting his third chance at the crown.

Co-promoters Joe Louis and Arthur Wirtz announced that the advance sales of "more than $250,000" indicate a crowd of 40,000 and a gross gate of at least $350,000.

Walcott, the Camden, N. J., veteran, finished his sparring today at his peaceful valley camp at Momence, Ill., with four rounds against Richard Hagan and Tommy Merrill. He went two sessions with each partner.

Isaacs' 275 Wins Virginia Open Golf Title

Norfolk, Va., June 19. (AP). Forty-two-year old Jack Isaacs, Langley Field professional whose legs weren't supposed to be good enough any longer to hold up under 72 holes of medal play, today won the twenty-second annual Virginia State Open golf championship.

Isaacs, who skied this morning to a two-over-par 72, came racing back after the lunch-time intermission with a regulation 70 for a 72-hole total of 5-below-par 275.

The chunky veteran of a lot of golf wars had started the afternoon round in a three-way deadlock with Professional Johnny O'Donnell, the defending champion from Norfolk's commissioned officers' club, and Amateur Wynsol Spencer, of Newport News. All had 54 hole totals of 205. Isaacs was paired in a threesome that included O'Donnell, who finished second and a stroke behind Jack with a 276.

Tied for third place were two professionals, Jack Toomer, of Clarksville, and Chandler Harper, of Portsmouth, each with scores of 280. Wynsol Spencer, Newport News insurance salesman, waltzed off with top amateur honors with a 282, the same card turned in by Harold Oatman, Norfolk pro.

Bunched with 283s were Johnny Kelly, the host pro, and Tom (Tick) Miller, Norfolk amateur. Clarence Owens, Martinsburg pro, had a 285 and Amateur Don O'Neil of Langley Field, 286.

Ralph, 2 Down, 4 to Go, Rallies to Beat Gardner

By West McLean
Post Reporter

A chip-shot from 15 feet off the green found the cup for Ralph Bogart, of the Chevy Chase Club on the thirty-seventh green yesterday and retained for him his title as Maryland State Amateur golf champion.

Bogart's rare par four capped a sensational come-back against his finalist opponent, Jim Gardner of the Washington Country Club. Bogart was wearing his 1948 crown sadly askew going to the thirty-third tee, when he was two down with four holes to play.

Gardner strayed over par figures for the first time in the morning round. Previously all his matches had been even par or better rounds. He matched par in the afternoon while Bogart was two over for the final 18.

A chip-shot from 15 feet off the green found the cup for Ralph Bogart, of the Chevy Chase Club on the thirty-seventh green yesterday and retained for him his title as Maryland State Amateur golf champion.

Bogart's rare par four capped a sensational come-back against his finalist opponent, Jim Gardner of the Washington Country Club. Bogart was wearing his 1948 crown sadly askew going to the thirty-third tee, when he was two down with four holes to play.

Both finalists had poor drives on the extra hole of the match at the Columbia club. Bogart hooked his into a trap, and Gardner was deep in the rough. A smashing second shot put Gardner within 30 feet of the green. Meanwhile Bogart was still short on his third.

Gardner first decided to chip but changed his mind and attempted to run the ball up to the pin. His shot was 12 feet short.

Bogart went for the pin on his fourth shot. His chip seemed destined to go about 10 feet or so past the cup, but it hit the back lip and dropped for a par. The pressure was then on Gardner who now needed to sink for a half.

He knocked his put three inches to the right of the cup and several feet past and the match was over.

Bogart, Chevy Chase Club champ, thus added the Maryland State Amateur championship to the Middle Atlantic Amateur title which he won at Columbia two weeks ago, defeating Gardner, Washington Country Club champ, in the finals of that tournament also. This gives Bogey a clean sweep of the area amateur titles.

Both players finished with medal scores of 142, two over regulation figures, over a course still slightly soggy from three days of rain.

Gardner, finalist in this event last year when he lost to Bogart, 2 up, seemed to be nursing a comfortable lead after the thirty-second hole but Bogart birdied the thirty-third and took a par on the next hole to even the match.

Both took pars on the thirty-fifth and Bogart missed a chance to win on the last hole when his putt stopped six inches short.

Bogart got off to a strong start, carding an even par 70 to take the lead, 2 up, after the morning 18-hole round, but Gardner surged back in the afternoon to shoot one under par golf for the first nine holes and hold a one-up lead at that point.

The tall Bogart lost another hole, the tenth, and then the two halved the rest of the holes through the

Wimbledon Tennis Play Starts Today

London, June 19 (AP). — Ted Schroeder, America's favorite, and 127 other top tennis amateurs start swatting tomorrow for the Wimbledon men's singles tennis championship, one of the world's most valuable sports prizes.

One postwar winner, Jack Kramer, reckoned the title was worth half of the $115,000 he made in the first year after turning professional. The balance of that small fortune was contributed by his other tennis honors, the United States singles championship and Davis Cup.

Many other Wimbledon champions—Don Budge, Fred Perry and Bobby Riggs—have used Wimbledon as a stepping stone to lucrative pro careers.

Who will win the 1949 title in the final, July 1?

Schroeder, 6000 miles from his home in La Crescenta, Calif., is the choice with officials who seeded him first, with bookmakers who made him a 7 to 4 favorite, and with most of the Wimbledon competitors of 27 nations.

Most No. 1 seeds get a couple of easy rounds before they have to roll out the big guns. But not Schroeder. In the first round tomorrow he comes to grips with the No. 1 dark horse, Gardnar Mulloy of Miami, Fla.

Saturday Schroeder beat Mulloy, 8—6, 6—0, in the London grass courts championship. But he will have to show his superiority in one more set at Wimbledon. It's the best of five sets there.

To the "champion" goes the honor of hitting the first ball and Bob Falkenburg of Beverly Hills, Calif., will do that against Drago Mitic, Yugoslav Davis Cup player.

Lanky Falkenburg, surprise winner last year in the finals with the Australian John Bromwich, is not given serious consideration to repeat. He has been erratic the past year and was seeded only fourth—below Dick Gonzales of Los Angeles.

Best bets to stop one of the leading Yanks from snatching the title are Bromwich and Eric Sturgess, the South African who was runner-up in the 1948 singles.

Jarsolav Drobny, the powerful Czech lefthander, has been seeded but he lacks the stamina to go two weeks in Wimbledon company. He recently lost a Davis Cup singles singles in which France ousted the Czechs from the European zone eliminations.

Besides Mulloy, the unseeded challengers with the best prospects are Earl Cochell of San Francisco, and Josef Asboth, Hungarian Davis Cup star, famous for his baseline play. Cochell is favoring a pulled muscle in his back.

Atchison-Keller Wins in 10th, 14-11

"Chick" Bruce hit a home run with two men on base in the tenth inning to give Atchison and Keller a 14-11 victory over Kensington in the first game of a Montgomery County Park League doubleheader yesterday at Capitol View. Kensington came back to win the second game, 8-2.

In other league games, Cissel-Saxon swept a twin bill from Myron-Cowell, 6-0 and 6-4, and the Elks Club edged past Williams Chevrolet, 7-6.

Robeson, Jr., Married to White Girl

New York, June 19 (AP).—Paul Robeson, jr., son of the Negro baritone, was married today to Marilyn Paula Greenberg, 21-year-old white girl.

A crowd of several hundred persons gathered outside the apartment house where the ceremony was performed by a Congregationalist minister. Some booed as the wedding party left the building.

Young Mrs. Robeson majored in psychology at Cornell. She has been active in the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People and the American Youth for Democracy.

Contempt For Press

Outside the apartment house of the clergyman, the Rev. John Whittier Darr, jr., the elder Robeson paused and faced a group of photographers.

"I have the greatest contempt for the democratic press," he said, "and there is something within me which keeps me from breaking your cameras over your heads. It is my intention to block off the couple to prevent you from making pictures of them."

The bride's mother, Mrs. Rae Greensberg, and a brother attended the wedding. The bride's father, Jack B. Greenberg, was not present.

Threatens Cameraman

As a photographer tried to snap his picture through the cab window, Robeson stepped out the other side of the cab, shook his fist at the photographer and tried to reach him.

The crowd was too thick for Robeson to move far, and a policeman urged him back into the cab.

"Now you know why I feel this way about this country," the singer shouted.

Racial Bias Laid to Bureau Of Engraving

Racial discrimination in the Bureau of Engraving is "widespread" and is apparent to even a "casual visitor," the Washington branch of the National Associaton for the Advancement of Colored People was told yesterday.

Nearly 300 persons attended the meeting in the Bible Way Church, 1130 New Jersey ave. nw.

The charge against the bureau was made by Thomas Richardson, executive officer, United Public Workers of America (CIO), who described the bureau as "one of the Government's factories in Washington in which discrimination is most widespread."

He said casual visitors could see Negroes and whites segregated "but both groups doing the same specific jobs." He claimed, out of some 3000 Negro employes there, "only 15 or 20 or 30 occupy jobs outside of the lowest" classifications.

Harold Buckles, secretary to Representative Arthur G. Klein (D., N. Y.), one of the other speakers at the meeting, urged NAACP members 'to do everything in your power to support the people in public office who believe in the democratic way."

Civitan Club Host

International officers of Civitan Clubs will be guests at a luncheon meeting of the Civitan Club of Washington at 12:30 p. m. Tuesday. The event will be at the Mayflower Hotel.

Cairo, Egypt, June 19 (U.P.)—The official newspaper Al Assas reported today that French officials have invited exiled Arab leader Emir Abd El Krim to return to Morocco "in accordance with his high position."

The newspaper said the venerable Emir had refused the invitation, saying he would not return unless France proclaimed the independence of her North African possessions and withdrew troops from those areas.

Abd El Krim, a leader of the fierce Riff Arabs, battled French and Spanish colonizers in Morocco for 20 years

Truman Returns From Cruise

President Truman returned to the capital late yesterday after a weekend cruise on Chesapeake Bay marked by some hard work on his plans to reorganize the executive branch of the Government.

The presidential yacht Williamsburg docked at the Navy Yard at 5 p. m. and the President immediately motored to Blair House. He left Washington Friday, accompanied by his daughter, Margaret, and several members of his staff.

Alabama Mother of 5 Told 'Klan Is Coming to See You'

Birmingham, Ala., June 19 (U.P.)—A special "terrorism" investigator was flooded with telephone calls today in the wake of Gov. James E. Folsom's request to report any evience of gangs of night-riders or threats.

The investigator said Mrs. Felix E. Thomas, mother of five children and wife of a truck driver, reported she had been warned "the Klan is coming to see you and your husband." She said an unidentified woman came to her house yesterday to deliver the threat.

Meanwhile, the new Citizens Voluntary Committee called a mass meeting of all civic, religious, patriotic and business groups for Wednesday. Its purpose will be to give active support to law and order.

In the Legislature at Montgomery, the House of Representatives is scheduled to take up a bill passed by the Senate, banning masks on public roads or on property of another person.

Federal Workers Look Hopefully To 'Hill' for Pay

This is the week for payless paydays for tens of thousands of additional Federal workers — unless Congress can break the deadlock on the second deficiency bill in the meantime.

Agriculture and Treasury are two big departments that don't have money to meet Thursday's payroll. Justice, Labor, Commerce, and Interior also are running short of cash. Many indipendent agencies also are broke. State, its officials believe, will be able to pay its employes.

The House has approved the conference report on the deficiency bill. It has also passed a resolution which would allow the agencies to spend salary funds tied up in the bill. The issue is now squarely up to the Senate.

REORGANIZATION: This is the week, too, when the President is scheduled to send several plans to reorganize the Government to Congress. Among the plans he may propose will be (1) to strengthen the Civil Service Commission by giving its president additional authority; (2) to rebuild the Labor Department by the transfer to it of the Bureau of Employment Security in the Federal Security Agency; (3) a plan to strengthen the administrative functions of the Postoffice Department, and (4) to set up an office of general services in which would be merged the War Assets Administration, Treasury's Bureau of Federal Supply, and most of the Federal Works Agency.

Grover Ensley, secretary to Senator Flanders (R., Vt.), has transferred to the Joint Congressional Committee on the Economic Report. He was the sparkplug behind the executive pay raise bill . . . Charter Heslep has joined the information staff at Atomic Energy Commission . . . J. Earl Cox and Grace Bierman are the employe member and alternate, respectively, on the efficiency rating board at Civil Aeronautics Board . . . Ralph A. Lamm is the new chief of the missile engineering section at the National Bureau of Standards . . . Arnold Miles of the Budget Bureau has taken leave to go to Puerto Rico to map a reorganization of its government.

TREASURY-POST OFFICE budget bill is deadlocked while Senate and House leaders argue over how many new employes the Internal Revenue Bureau should have.

As the bill now stands, Treasury would be able to hire several thousand new employes, mainly in Revenue, but Post Office would be required to lay off several thousand employes if its business slumps. Post Office didn't get all of the money it asked for to pay salaries but it's free to go back to Congress for additional funds if its business boom continues.

The Senate is insisting on 7000 new Revenue workers, the number requested by the President. It believes they would be able to bring in half a billion dollars annually in taxes that otherwise wouldn't be collected. The House has agreed to 2500 new Revenue people. The new branches are in agreement on these Treasury appropriations:

Secretary's office, $750,000; Office of Administrative Services, $1,150,000; (small cuts are indicated for these offices) Customs Bureau, $1,020,000 here and $35,-150,000 in the field; (both figures below the amounts requested); Narcotics Bureau, $1,610,000; (full amount requested) Bureau of Engraving and Printing, $15,660,-000; Secret Service, $1,925,000, and $76,250,000 for pay aand allowances of Coast Guard personnel, which is nearly two millions more than was originally allowed by the House.

Money Everywhere — But Not a Paycheck

San Francisco, June 18 (U.P.)— Some of the Treasury Department employes who help coin the money today faced the unique problem of being broke while surrounded by a mint.

A unit of Uncle Sam's money-making agency, the Internal Revenue alcohol tax unit, received notice that June 22 paychecks would be delayed—"due to a depletion of funds." J. H. Maloney, unit director, is banking his hopes on a deficiency appropriation from Washington by July 1.

Movements of Cecil Before Being Hurt Traced by Police

Police continued yesterday to trace the movements early Saturday of a Capital Transit employe to determine how he suffered an injury that caused his death.

The victim, Willard Cecil, 47, arrived at an apartment at 1501 Olive st. ne., at 2 a. m., with a severe head wound and died six hours later. Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald said death resulted from a skull fracture, caused by a fall or a blow.

Detectve Sergt. Theodore R. Haage of the homicide squad, said police traced Cecil's movements Friday night until 12:30 a. m., when he left a bus at 11th st. and New York ave. nw.

Police say Cecil was injured just before he arrived at the home of Mrs. Marie Daly, at the Olive st. address, because he could not have remained conscious long enough to travel far.

Mrs. Daly said yesterday that Cecil "rented a room and was a boarder" in her home, and that she has known him about five years. He refused to answer her questions as to how he had been hurt.

His wife, who lives at 221 17th st. ne., said yesterday "his home is here, and he lived here with me."

Man, 2 Women Hurt as Car Strikes Light Poles in N. E.

Three persons were injured about 2:30 a. m. yesterday when a club coupe in which they were passengers suddenly spun from the highway and crashed into two light poles on Bladensburg rd. at R st. ne.

Those hurt were: Eugene Vandeventer, 20, of 711 Emerson st. ne., broken right shoulder; Marie Finter, 22, of 326 37th pl. se., facial cuts; Marie Dailey, 33, of 512 9th st. se., cuts and bruises. Driver of the car, John R. Bowman, 22, of 711 Emerson st. ne., was uninjured. He was charged by police with failing to give full time and attention to his driving.

One Taken to Casualty

Vandeventer was admitted to Casualty Hospital. The two women were treated and released.

Police said Bowman told them he had "no idea of what happened" when the car, traveling south on Bladensburg rd. left the highway, hit an iron light standard, then continued on to crash into a wooden pole. The highway had been dampened by rain but was not "slick," police said.

A waitress, Angelina Mason, was leaving her place of work nearby when she heard the crash. Aided by two men, she said, she pulled "one of the women" from the wreckage.

An autopsy will be performed today on a traffic victim, Luther J. Lacey, 49, of 442 Q st. nw., who died Saturday in Freedmen's Hospital after being struck by an auto, police said, while crossing the intersection of 11th and I sts. nw.

Jacqueline

Jackie was named queen after 167 books of 10 tickets to a June festival at the Episcopal Church of Our Saviour, 16th and Irving sts. ne., were sold to her credit. The festival will be Tuesday and Wednesday at 7 p. m. on the church grounds.

Jackie's father, Willmore T. Pyles, a mechanic at the Dalecarlia Reservoir, was chosen one of two ideal fathers in 1945 after his four daughters submitted a prize-winning letter about him. They live at 1037 Irving st. ne.

$4000 Weekly Tax Voted to Aid Strikers

Driver-Salesmen Of Pie Concerns To Benefit From Union Assessment

An assessment totalling about $4000 a week was voted yesterday by Bakery Salesmen's Local 33 (AFL) to bolster benefits being paid to members on strike against the city's four major pie bakeries.

The striking members, some 100 driver-salesmen for the pie companies, have been receiving $65 a week in strike benefits since they walked out on June 3, a union official said.

The weekly fund, voted at a local meeting yesterday afternoon, was set up "for as long as the strike lasts" and will be paid by about 900 members who are working, according to Robert C. Lester, secretary.

These are employes of bread bakeries who received a $4 a week increase in wages, the same amount the pie driver-salesmen have asked for. The pie drivers' contract expired May 1. No negotiations have been held since the strike began.

Meanwhile, AFL carpenters and laborers remained deadlocked in their strike against contractor members of the Master Builders Association.

However, an attempt to resolve the laborers' strike will be made at 2 p. m. today when representatives of laborers and builders are scheduled to meet across the table with Federal Mediator James Holden. The strike, in effect since June 3, is over a demand for 15 cents more an hour.

No negotiations are scheduled at this time for the carpenters, who walked out the day before the laborers. The carpenters are asking 10 cents more an hour and claim a number of contractors have agreed to those terms and have taken their workers back.

On Tuesday afternoon, representatives of the Capital Transit Co. and its AFL operators' and maintenance men will meet with Holden in an attempt to agree on renewal terms of their contract, which expires July 1. The union originally asked for a 25 cent an hour increase, but has reportedly reduced its demand.

On Saturday, a possible strike of about 150 bus drivers and shop employes of the Washington, Marlboro and Annapolis Motor Lines, Inc., was averted when a new contract was signed providing an across-the-board raise of 5 cents an hour, as well as certain changes in vacations and working conditions.

The new contract with Local 1365, Amalgamated Association of Street Electric Railway and Motor Coach Employes of America, provides for top scales of $1.33 an hour for drivers, and $1.45 for shop employes. The old contract expired May 20.

Mrs. Turner was admitted to Garfield Hospital, suffering a fractured right arm, contusion to the right eye, possible internal injuries and shock. Her condition was described as "serious."

D. C. Fathers Honored at First Banquet

The American Business Association, Inc., last night sowed the seeds of what it hopes will sprout into an annual institution in Washington—a Father's Day banquet.

Clark Griffith, scheduled to be honored as the "father of baseball in the District of Columbia," was absent. His spokesman said he was too hurt to attend after his Washington Nationals lost two games to the Detroit Tigers.

Senator Alexander Wiley (R., Wis.), the principal speaker, urged the 100 fathers present to rededicate themselves to "creating new hope in our children that we're not going to pot."

"We should remember anew," the Senator said "that life is something besides the Marxist concept of materialism."

Arthur Clarendon Smith was honored as the "founding father" of the Federation of Businessmen's Associations in the District of Columbia."

Special guests were Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Davenport and daughters. avenport was the 1948 winner of The Washington Post's Ideal Father Contest.

7-Man Group To Meet for Transit Study

A seven-man committee, which will direct preparation of a new master plan for the future development of transportation facilities in Greater Washington will be organized shortly as the study may begin July 15.

Deputy Director of Highways Samuel R. Harrison, the District government's representative on the group, said a meeting will be called in the next week or 10 days to organize the committee, name a chairman, select a technical adviser and an 8 to 10 man staff.

The governments of the District, Maryland and Virginia will join with representatives of the Public Roads Administration, Military District of Washington, National Capital Park and Planning Commission and transit firms in preparing the plan.

The District, Maryland and Virginia will pay $12,000 each and the PRA $36,000 for the study, which is expected to take about a year and a half. Extensive origin and destination traffic surveys made here last year will be used as the basis for the planning.

All participants except Virginia have named their representatives to the committee. In addition to Harrison, they are:

George Lewis, director of planning, Maryland State Roads Commission; Robert Coffman, chief of planning and programs section, Washington division, Public Roads Administration; John Nolen, jr., planning director, National Capital Park and Planning Commission; Warren Adams, planning section, Capital Transit Co., and Lieut. Col. Victor E. Maston, transportation officer, Military District of Washington.

Study Begun Of Need for 3d Anacostia River Bridge

Preliminary Report On Traffic Figures Now in Preparation, Gen. Young Reveals

By Sam Zagoria
Post Reporter

A first step toward construction of another bridge across the Anacostia River has been taken by the District government, it was learned yesterday.

Brig. Gen. Gordon R. Young, engineer commissioner, disclosed that the District Highway Department has completed a study on the need for an additional span from information obtained last year in comprehensive "origin and destination" survey.

Analysis of figures from this survey form part of a report being compiled on need for the third bridge. The report will precede drafting of preliminary plans.

Location of New Span

General Young said that although no final conclusions have been reached on the location of the bridge, this much is clear:

1. It will be located between the present Sousa and Benning rd. crossings.

2. Massachusetts ave. and East Capital st. are under consideration. Right of way through Gallinger Hospital grounds is available for either route. The National Capital Park and Planning Commission has approved Massachusetts ave.

3. The bridge will be high enough not to require a draw. General Young said that at present construction costs, the bridge may be expected to run about six million dollars, with the total cost, including land and approaches, reaching 10 to 12 million.

Report in Two Months

The Highway Department will continue its study and the final report is expected in two months, the Commissioner said. Present indications are that the structure would be a Federal aid project, with the Public Roads Administration sharing the cost.

Residents of the rapidly expanding Northeast and Southeast sections east of the Anacostia have complained about the traffic tieups now occurring regularly on the present bridge.

The Southeast Council of Citizens Associations, which has led the fight for relief, was told in March that another bridge was the only solution for daily jams at Barney Circle, which is the city's worst traffic problem, in the opinion of General Young.

The Commissioner pointed out that due to present commitments, it would be at least two years before funds could be found for the new bridge, but meanwhile plans could be drawn.

Police Still Probe Beating Of 2 Youths

First precinct police continued their investigation yesterday into the alleged beating by police of two youths in front of central cellblock in the Municipal Building last Friday.

A report on the incident is expected to be issued this week by Capt. Howard V. Covell, commanding officer of the First Precinct.

The youths, Caspar W. Gregory, 20, of 1430 Fairmont st. nw., and Michael J. Sheehy, of 1477 Newton st. nw., told reporters they were beaten following their arrest on charges of destroying private property. An additional charge of kicking a policeman was placed against Gregory.

Man Tries Bridge Leap, Poison, but Escapes Death

A 48-year-old Red Cross employe escaped death twice yesterday, first by falling into a tree after plunging off a bridge and later from drinking ammonia.

Police reported the man said he had leaped from Massachusetts ave. bridge but landed in a tree. He then went home, police said, and later was found by his wife in a semiconscious condition in their apartment. He told her he had drunk a half pint of household ammonia.

At Gallinger Hospital his stomach was pumped out. His condition was reported good.

A hospital physician said the man suffered from back injuries and hand cuts, apparently from landing in the tree. He was held for observation.

Navy Dedication Slated June 27

THEIR LETTERS WON CONTEST

Children Share Fete With 'Ideal Father'

Broadcast, Feast, Movie Mark Day For Snyder Family

For being selected the best dad in the Greater Washington area, the good-natured mathematician for the War Department could thank his vivacious brown-eyed children—Elaine, 12; Sol, 10; Carolyn, 6, and maybe even Irving ("Butch"), 2.

Attractive Mrs. Pat Snyder knew nothing about the letters which led The Washington Post to select Snyder as an ideal father—and started the family on a round of entertainment yesterday.

First there was an interview over Station WTOP, at 1:15 p. m. Dinner followed at the Statler Hotel then came a stage show and movie treat at Loew's Capitol Theater.

Family Goes on Air

At WTOP, where all the Snyders were guests on the D. C. Dateline program, Mrs. Snyder patted Carolyn's curl-topped head and helped her with her lines.

It was old stuff for Elaine and Sol. They had been on the air before. In the control room, Mrs. Snyder took care of Butch who "although the youngest, is more mischievous than the other three put together."

The show went off without a hitch, and the children were eager to tell over the air what they had written about their 37-year-old Dad.

Carolyn, who starts school this fall and hasn't learned to read yet, memorized her lines: "My father is the best Daddy in the whole world. He carries me to bed after I have my bath and kisses me before I go to bed."

Butch's letter to "his best Daddy" and Laddie, the dog's sentiments, were left for Elaine to broadcast.

Sitting in the Embassy Room of the Statler for dinner, Dad Snyder's smile broadened as he declared: "You know, we didn't have a honeymoon at all—this is the nicest special treat we have ever had."

DINING OUT—Ideal Father Samuel Snyder shares Father's Day dinner with his wife and children at the Hotel Statler. They are (from left) Carolyn, 6; Mrs. Snyder, Irving, 2 (held by daddy); Elaine, 12, and Sol, 10

Just then, flowers were brought to the table for his wife and two girls—an orchid for mother, and two pink and white rose corsages for his daughters to match their pink dresses.

When Dad ordered turkey "with all the trimmin's," Elaine, Sol and Butch followed suit. Mrs. Snyder couldn't pass up "baked Maine lobster thermidor" because "it's something we never have at home." Caroline wanted chicken and fish and got it.

When it came time for the strawberry ice cream pie, Dad Snyder, who had been especially attentive to Butch, said: 'Even you aren't going to get me away from this."

The Ideal Dad clapped his hands above his head and cheered with the rest when he was introduced to the Loew's Capitol audience during the stage show.

Longest day of the year, the day on which the sun sets latest, will be Wednesday, when old Sol will be above the horizon for 15 hours and 4 minutes.

Although summer starts officially on June 21 (Tuesday) and continues until September 23, the period when there is the greatest amount of sunshine began about May 7 and will continue until about August 5.

Kenneth H. Jenkins, 37, a student pilot, was injured slightly near Congressional airport yesterday when he made a forced landing in a light plane among a grove of trees.

He was treated at Surburban Hospital for a cut on his lip and possible back injury.

Jenkins told police he had taken off from the airport and had gained about 200 feet of altitude when the ship's engine cut to about a third normal power. He turned and tried to land in an open field, but was unable to reach it. The crash followed. The plane propeller, a wing tip, and a landing wheel were damaged. Congressional Airport is on Rt. 240, near Rockville, Md.

Boy Governors Urge Courses In Political Ideologies

A resolution urging legislation requiring all secondary schools to include courses in political ideologies in their curriculum was passed yesterday by 19 "boy governors."

The boys, who were elected by model legislatures in their home States, passed the resolution at the final session of a four-day meeting here. The program was under direction of the YMCA youth and government program.

In the resolution, the boys pointed out that American youth "recognizes how closely the United States is bound to the world, culturally, economically and politically" and realize the importance of understanding differences in cultures, and forms of governments.

They called for legislation "requiring all secondary schools to include in their curriculum a course in political ideologies, including communism, socialism and fascism; courses to be taught by competent, specially trained teachers."

The boys also urged teaching of courses in social relations and sex education in every high school as a regular classroom course. The courses, they said, should be taught to freshmen and sophomores.

Other Resolutions urged:

1. Minimum salaries of $2,400 for teachers with bachelor's degrees, progressive salary advancement, and periodic examinations of teachers to guarantee high scholastic standards.

2. Equal educational opportunity for all school students. (They voted down a resolution urging non-segregation in the schools.).

3. Examination and treatment of victims of tuberculosis and venereal disease.

4. Arrest and fines for persons caught in possession of alcoholic beverages while attending public school sports events or on public school grounds.

Police Hunt Pair In Row at Club At College Park

Two youths who created a disturbance at the Prince Georges Country Club early yesterday and eluded pursuers were being sought last night by College Park, Md., police.

Chief of Police Daniel Wiseman of College Park, who was present, appointed deputies to help him eject the pair. Wiseman said when they were out of the place one threw an empty whisky bottle and hit a woman on the head, injuring her slightly.

One fled on foot across the club's golf course and outdistanced those who chased him. The other jumped into a car in which the pair had come to the club and escaped. Chief Wiseman said he thinks he knows who they were.

Communists Talk Gospel, Author Says

Communists have made progress throughout the world because they promise rapid fulfillment of Christian objectives, Stanley High, author and editor, yesterday told the National Council of the YMCA.

High spoke at the closing session of the annual meeting of the council at the Statler.

He said that, though "no Communist would be caught with a copy of the gospel on him, every Communist, everywhere among the world's underprivileged, talks the language of the gospels."

Communists, he said, are proving that we don't need to learn a new message for these times, but need better exponents of the old message.

Eugene R. McCarthy, St. Louis industrialist, was elected to his third term as national council president. E. Reed Shutt, Rochester, N. Y.; John H. Wilson, Wichita Falls, Tex.; William J. Grede, Milwaukee, and J Leslie Dunstan, Honolulu, Hawaii, were named vice presidents; Tracy K. Jones, Syracuse, N. Y., recording secretary, and Robert J. Maloney, Houston, Tex., and Edwin B. Simon Twins Get Cornell Awards, Stay Together

The lads, William and David Simon, of 1771 Lanier pl. nw., have been awarded the five-year John McMullen Scholarship to Cornell University School of Engineering.

The boys attribute their interest in engineering to their father, Isaac B. Simon, a mathematics teacher at Eastern High School, who used to leave books on engineering and higher mathematics in strategic spots about the house. The lads played on the tennis team at Central and, they say, are evenly matched. David was a step ahead in studies, however, finishing second in his graduating class while William was fifth.

The Cornell Alumni Club of Washington yesterday announced the awarding of the Alumni club scholarship and the university president's tuition scholarship to William B. Mayr of 3431 Utah st., Arlington.

Hot Words Flung In Taylor-Mundt Televised Joust

By the United Press

Senator Glen H. Taylor (D., Idaho) yesterday stopped just short of flinging the epithet liar at Senator Karl E. Mundt (R., S. Dak.) during a television debate on Communist-control legislation.

In one exchange, Mundt, said:

"I am opposed to Communism. You are not."

"Senator Mundt," answered Taylor, boiling mad, "if it were permissible on this program to use that flat word, I would use it. But it is not, so I will say that you are not telling the truth, sir!"

Mundt then revised his statement.

"Rather than saying you are not against Communism, let me say you are against doing effective to curb it," he amended.

Taylor said he is in favor of "doing positive things" to make the American way of life more attractive. That, he said, will do more than anything else to stop domestic Communism.

How to Remove Wallpaper Spots

What is the method for removing grease spots from wallpaper with Fuller's Earth and carbon tetrachloride? N. H. N

Make a paste of Fuller's Earth and carbon tetrachloride. Apply thickly to spot, thinning out at the edges beyond the soiled area. Let remain until thoroughly dry. Wipe off carefully with cloth dampened with carbon tetrachloride. Repeat treatment if necessary.

Another method is to heat the Fuller's Earth in an old tin jar top or a pie tin. Then apply it quickly to the spot in the manner described above. A spatula can be used for this purpose and the hot Fuller's Earth will cling to the wall. When thoroughly cool, brush off with whisk broom. Two applications may be required, but it has an advantage over the carbon tetrachloride method in that there is no chance of its making the color in the wallpaper "bleed."

M. N. asked for recipes using rice or potato flour. Here is one for a rice flour cake. A. P.

Rice Sponge Cake

4 eggs
1 cup sugar
¼ teaspoon salt
2 tablespoons lemon juice

Mix as any sponge cake. Bake at first in medium oven, then increase heat to "hot."

Can you tell me some way to stop a small drip in the bathroom water tank which has been caused by a hair line crack? The unit seat and tank is all in one piece which would make an expensive replacement. I feel sure there must be something with which I could paint the inside of the tank (when perfectly dry) which would take care of everything. E. G. D.

The crack can be easily closed by using a waterproof cement which will adhere to enamel. As you suggest the tank must be drained so the crack is allowed to dry thoroughly. Apply the cement from the inside of the tank taking care that the crack is entirely filled. Let dry before returning the water to the tank.

Will you let me know what is the best material for a man's slack suit, consisting of trousers and sport shirts? I want a material that will be cool in the Washington summer heat, not crease too easily and be washable. Do you recommend linen or rayon? I do not want a wool tropical material, as I have two suits now. I also have seersucker suits. Cost of the material is not too important. S. U.

The materials available for slack suits which are cool, crease resistant and washable are not too plentiful. However, there are two materials which meet these requirements—a cotton cord and a crease resistant linen. The cotton cord is similar in appearance to seersucker but is more satisfactory from the standpoint of holding its shape because the material has more body. It is washable and cool.

The crease resistant linen is called moygashel and comes in natural and white. It would be more expensive than the cotton, but would be cool and entirely washable.

There are other materials on the market which are rayon or combinations of cotton and rayon, but these are more satisfactory if they are dry cleaned rather than washed.

Soap-filled steel wool pads do not take off the burned-on spots from the outside of my cooking utensils. How can I take them off and keep them shining thereafter? I like these pots of mine with glass tops, but I have found to my amazement they need lots of water (at least a cup to start) or all foods burn. Why? Can you help? M. A. B.

I have discussed your difficulties with the agent for your cooking utensils and he recommends either one of two methods to remove the burned-on spots. One way is to scrub them with a wet steel brush in hot soapy water. The other is to scrub with a dry brush while the utensil is on the stove hot.

There is a possibility you are using a too high temperature under the pans, causing the burning. However, to find out the exact cause of your difficulty, I suggest you call Mr. Pauley at Lincoln 3-5326.

When They Don't Write

Letters home are often a source of conflict between parents and children. Youngsters go off to camp, to visit grandparents, or to be with friends for a week or two. It's natural, of course, for Mom and Pop to want to hear from their offspring. If the youngsters are away for the first time, this is especially true.

Yet children often find it hard to write. They don't know what to say. They are too busy to stop and struggle with pencil or pen. Or they just don't think about it.

Actually, one indication as to whether youngsters are happy or not away from home is to be found in the frequency with which they write. If two or three letters a week come through the mail, one can be reasonably certain that the child is feeling homesick, out of place or otherwise unhappy. Sometimes the recognition of this fact helps parents "take" the lack of letter writing.

A simple suggestion may help to make it easy for the junior member of the family to keep in touch with home base. Address a number of postcards or envelopes to yourself and put them in his bag. You might even write a few alternate messages that he can check and mail home. The first one, for instance: "Arrived at —— o'clock." "went boating——, hiking ——, fed the cows——" or any other items that are likely to be appropriate.

THE DISTRICT LINE by Bill Gold

Humidity Brings Forth Some Dry Humor

Thanks to R. L. Curtis of 1322 V st. se. for suggesting the lines:

Of thee I sing, O Weatherman
Although you have no pity.
You send us days that make my song
A mournful humi-ditty.

HOME RULE OUTLOOK

A member of the House District Committee tells me it's even money the committee will prevent the Home Rule Bill from reaching the floor for a vote; but if the bill does get as far as the floor, it's 2 to 1 that it'll be passed.

GIVE-AWAYS

"Child's playpen, no pad; two doll cribs, no mattress. All need paint." (Shepherd 2379.)

"Five healthy puppies seek loving owners." (Falls Church 8217 after 6 p. m.)

"Eight-month-old male pup; affectionate, good watchdog." (Garfield 5144.)

"Three 6-week-old kittens, gray and white." (Owens 0189.)

"Pedigreed black female cocker, 6 months old; it breaks my heart to give her up, but we'll be evicted if I don't." (Ordway 7810.)

"Mature female rabbit; will breed her before giving away, if desired." (Falls Church 4641.)

CRYSTAL BALL

If at the future I could peep,
I'd soon be done with bosses.
A tidy fortune I would reap
Just playing sure-thing hosses.

IDEAL FATHER WHO DIDN'T WIN

The Washington Post's "Ideal Father for 1949" has now been officially selected and honored, and a fine choice it was.

But I'd like to tell you about a fellow who didn't win—because of a technicality. He's not the father of the boys who nominated him.

The five Degges boys—Ernest, Leo, Bill, Bobby and Jimmy—sent in this letter:

"We are five boys, aged 5, 7, 9, 11 and 13. We lost our real Dad in the service, during the war.

"It was a great loss, for we all worshipped our father.

"But we have found someone else we think is pretty wonderful. He lost his only son in the war.

"The reason we think this man is an Ideal Dad is because he does the things our Dad used to do. He plays ball and many other games with us. He takes us to the beach and on picnics, to the rodeo, to the airport, and to many other places where boys enjoy going.

"Just this past Sunday he took us all over to his house where we had dinner and enjoyed an evening of games and singing while his wife played the piano.

"We all think he is pretty wonderful because we wouldn't get to go many places if it weren't for him; and there aren't many men who would take five boys like us swimming and play with us.

"So the man we would like to win the Ideal Father contest is Mr. L. L. Benjamin of 435 Turner st., Chevy Chase, Md."

Congratulations, Mr. Benjamin. You couldn't win the Ideal Father contest because you're not really the father of these lads—but you have won something far more valuable: five friends.

VAGRANT THOUGHT

Of course, the best place to spend your vacation is at home—but how do you sell that one to your family?

COURTESY COSTS NOTHING

Police Superintendent Barrett earns the gratitude of the entire community by again reminding his policemen that they are expected to maintain order in a courteous, cooperative manner.

I know that it's easy for a policeman to become short-tempered after "putting up with the public" month after month and year after year. But, by that standard, pretty soon all of us would be growling at each other—because we're all part of "the public," and therefore in constant contact with it.

Janet P. Mallorey of 4321 Verplanck pl. nw. furnishes a good example of how an officious policeman can irritate folks.

Janet's mother was driving her 82-year-old father down to the Second National Bank. Grandpa had a sore foot, and didn't want to do any more walking than absolutely necessary.

So Janet's mother tried to make a turn at 7th and E sts., as other cars in the same lane had done ahead of her. But the policeman imperiously held up his hand, and ordered her to drive straight on through. The attempted explanation was cut short by a command-ing sweep of the policeman's hand.

So there was nothing to do but let Grandpa out in the middle of the next block, and make him hobble back to the bank as best he could.

Janet is still trying to figure out why it was all right for some of the cars to turn, but wrong for others to do it.

SHOULD BE NICE IN THE WINTER TIME

Marge Holben of the Naval Air Station at Patuxent River, Md., notes that her favorite newspaper recently ran a classified ad which offered:

"LA SALLE — '37, 4-dr. sed.; quiet, in new building, convenient to new radiator; $300.

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

Tourist-Envoy Idea Is Suggested

By Drew Pearson

(Editor's Note—Part of Drew Pearson's column today takes the form of a letter to James Webb, Acting Secretary of State.)

Mr. James Webb,
Acting Secretary of State,
Washington, D. C.

Dear Jimmie:

When your old chief, O. Max Gardiner, was preparing to become Ambassador to England, he was working on an idea which you, who were not with him at that particular time, may not have known about. And since Max is now where he can't put his own ideas across, it occurred to me that maybe you would consider helping to put them across for him.

James Webb

This is the season when thousands of American tourists are sailing for Europe and when Max would have especially wanted his idea to be circulated.

Though Max was departing for our most important of all embassies, he felt that no Ambassador was any more important than the rest of the American people. In brief, he thought that every traveling American, whether he likes it or not, is an unofficial ambassador, and as he conducts himself abroad so he builds up good will or ill will for his country.

So Max figured it might be a swell idea to take a leaf out of the Army's book and let everyone getting a passport also receive a little pamphlet on the importance of spreading good will while traveling abroad.

The State Department hands out a lot of other dull visa information with each passport which nobody ever reads. It might as well hand out some human, readable information instead.

GIs Were Ambassadors

Before the American Army landed in England, every GI was given a small booklet telling him about the English people, reminding him that he was a representative of his country, that whatever he did would reflect on his country.

The Army did an A-1 job of selling the American soldiers on getting along with their allies and most GIs took the hint. On the whole, they were excellent Ambassadors for the U. S. A.

I think what Max Gardner had in mind was that an invading Army of tourists can be pretty much like an invading army in wartime. Even though we're fighting on the same side or even though we're spending tourist dollars, we sometimes get in each other's hair.

The raucous American tourist who knows all, sees all and wants to tell all, can cause his country more harm than an Ambassador can patch up in a week. He thinks that a surfeit of dollars can atone for a deficit of courtesy. On the other hand, the kindly American who is much more typical of this country can create more good will than a paid Ambassador, because there are so many of them.

As we all know, getting around in Europe isn't so easy these days. You butt your head against a certain number of slow-moving customs officials, slick-moving waiters and dollar-greedy hotel managers. And that's why it's all the more important for Americans traveling abroad to be reminded that even though they pay taxes to keep ambassadors plenipotentiary and envoys extraordinary on the job, they themselves can do an equally important job of representing their country abroad.

I realize that some know-it-all Americans would resent being given this word of advice when their passports are handed out by the State Department. But I don't think they'd resent it if they knew it came from a great human being like Max Gardner who was always thinking about his country first and who isn't around to help his country any more.

Sincerely yours,
Drew Pearson.

ECA Bonanza in Oil

While economy-at-any-cost Senators are chopping off dollars going to Europe under the Marshall Plan, they have completely overlooked the unfair profits rolling back. Of these, the big oil companies alone are gobbling up more Marshall Plan dollars than the Senators have been able to save.

The amazing, little-realized fact is that 20 per cent of the money appropriated for the Marshall Plan is spent for oil products. And out of each dollar, the oil industry is squeezing a fantastic profit. What this really amounts to is carpet-bagging—at the expense of European recovery and the American taxpayer.

Here are some of the eye-opening ECA figures: It costs the oil companies only 40 cents for a barrel of Saudi Arabian oil. Yet these companies have been charging Marshall Plan nations $2.20 a barrel for fuel oil. After a great deal of ECA pressure, this was finally reduced to $1.75 a barrel. Yet for the same oil the Navy pays only $1.40 a barrel.

How the Navy is able to buy oil 35 cents cheaper is difficult to understand—particularly because of the short haul from Saudi Arabia to Europe.

However, the probable explanation simply is that ECA is not a tough customer. In fact, ECA isn't permitted to deal directly with the oil companies, merely puts up the cash and leaves it to individual countries to arrange the price.

ECA is constantly hammering at the oil companies, however, to bring their prices within reason. Instead of using the lash of public criticism, ECA is merely slapping the oil boys over the wrist in private. As a result, ECA has got nowhere.

The Senate might also find it more economical to demand more value from the dollars spent rather than to cut appropriations. In that way, Marshall Plan dollars could be stretched much farther.

Note—The Federal Trade Commission is also investigating oil profits under the Marshall Plan—to find out whether the antitrust laws have been violated.

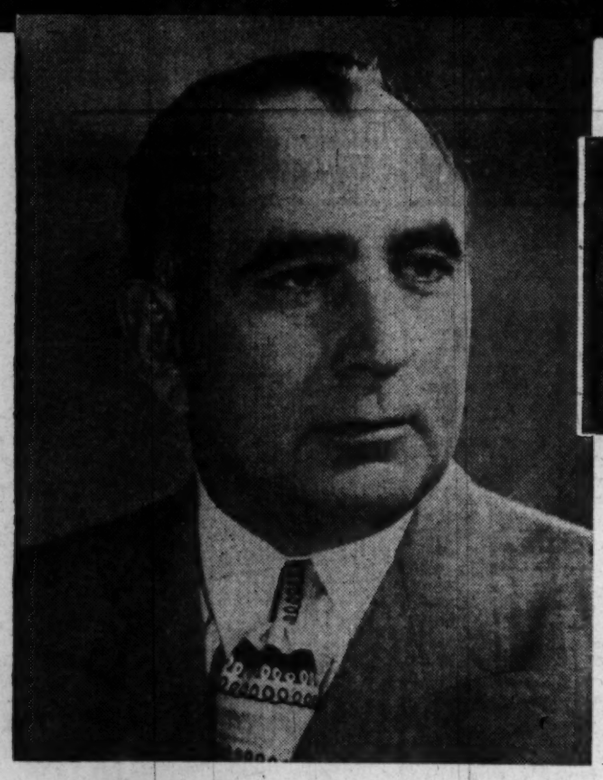
Number 20 in a Series... Hecht Co. Personalities in the News



HARRY DAVIDOW, General Merchandise Manager of The Hecht Co., was born in Troy, New York. He came to The Hecht Co. in 1926, after launching his department store career with a large Brooklyn, New York, store. At The Hecht Co., Mr. Davidow's steady climb up the ladder of success has brought him from an Assistant Merchandise Manager to Merchandise Manager of the Homewares Division, to General Merchandise Manager, Vice President and member of the Board of Directors of The Hecht Corporation which operates 12 stores in Washington, Maryland and New York. Mr. Davidow is married . . . has one son, Harry M. ("Chip") . . . plays golf for relaxation . . . has a year 'round sun tan that is the envy of everyone at the store.

Board Of Strategy . . .

SAYS HARRY M. DAVIDOW, GENERAL MERCHANDISE MANAGER OF THE HECHT CO.

Meet The Hecht Co.'s Board of Strategy . . . the men who provide the goods you, the buying public, want . . . when you want it. On a scorching July day these men talk about fur coats. While you're stoking your furnace in mid-January, these men discuss bathing suits and sun-back dresses. Anticipating the vast needs of Hecht Co. customers is the primary job of our merchandise managers. Manufacturing and shipment of goods takes many months. It's their job to be two leaps and a couple of seasons ahead of the calendar. No one man could possibly be expected to perform the task of guiding the buying of over 50,000,000 dollars worth of goods a year for The Hecht Co. The job is therefore delegated to our 8 divisional merchandise managers, each of whom controls the destiny of his portion of the store. The merchandise managers work under the supervision and direction of Mr. Davidow, the General Merchandise Manager, who sets the store's buying policy.

These men are specialists in their field . . . men's apparel . . . women's fashions . . . homewares . . . accessories, etc. And they in turn supervise a staff of over a hundred buyers who comb the markets of the world, ferreting out the goods you want. Each of our buyers travels an average of 5,000 miles a year . . . by plane . . . train . . . automobile, from the coast of Maine to the shores of California . . . from Canada to New Orleans . . . working with our buying offices in New York, Chicago, St. Louis, Dallas and Los Angeles . . . choosing, comparing, placing orders, timing shipments so that the goods will arrive when you want them. The Publicity Department is also represented on our Board of Strategy. Their job is to bring you the story of this merchandise . . . through newspapers, radio, television and direct mail. So when you find a selection of 17 different types of sun tan oil on our counters and you see it advertised in the paper . . . it's no accident, but the result of careful planning by our Board of Strategy whose weekly meetings help make The Hecht Co. a great place to work . . . a great place to shop.
